Parliament clears decks for GST rollout

NEW DELHI, April 6: Parliament today cleared the decks for the rollout of the historic Goods and Services Tax (GST) from July 1 as it approved four supporting legislations to usher in the one-nation-one-tax regime.

The Central GST Bill, 2017; The Integrated GST Bill, 2017; The GST (Compensation to States) Bill, 2017; and The Union Territory GST Bill, 2017 were returned by the Rajya Sabha by a voice vote as all parties were on board.

"There was no hesitation in sharing the credit for this with everyone, particularly state governments, because we are now creating a situation which was originally not anticipated in the Constitution," said Jaitley, who went to the Opposition benches to thank them, particularly Mammoan Singh, for the cooperation.

Hasina arriving on 4-day visit today

SPL CORRESPONDENT

NEW DELHI, April 6: India is expected to roll out the red carpet when Prime Minister of Bangladesh Sheikh Hasina arrives here tomorrow on a four-day visit. At least 25-30 agreements are expected to be signed during the visit and there will be two memorandums of understanding (MoUs) on defence.

However, the much-expected Teesta Water Sharing Agreement is unlikely to be signed during the visit, said sources.

President Pranab Mukherjee, meanwhile, invited all the Chief Ministers of the Northeastern States to attend the State Banquet on Friday evening though they have not been invited for the main meeting. Several of the Chief

China accuses India of fuelling tension

BEIJING, April 6: China today accused India of "fuelling tensions" and damaging its interests by allowing the Dalai Lama to visit Arunachal Pradesh while the state media here called for answering "blows with blows" if New Delhi chooses to "play dirty".

"I can confirm that China has lodged protest in Beijing and Delhi," yesterday, Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Hu Chunying told a media briefing here.

The protest was lodged in Beijing with Indian Ambassador to China Vijay Gokhale. In Delhi, the protest was lodged with the competent officials of the External Affairs Ministry, Hu said.

Asked whether Beijing views India's permission to the 81-year-old Dalai Lama to visit Arunachal Pradesh as amounting to questioning the 'One China' policy, Hu said, "I want to re-emphasise that on issues concerning China's major concern and core interests, territorial and sovereignty, China's position is consistent."

BJP luring Dhemaji voters: Cong

STAFF REPORTER

GUWAHATI, April 6: The Assam Pradesh Congress Committee today filed a complaint with the State Chief Electoral Officer, alleging that the BJP candidate for the Dhemaji bypoll at Gogamukh yesterday said if the voters vote for Pegu, BJP would provide the voters 'something' in exchange. This was followed by distribution of 'something' among people by a BJP supporter standing behind the MLA. The entire episode was videographed by the journalists of some TV channels.

DIPR Director quizzed over graft charge

STAFF REPORTER

GUWAHATI, April 6: A team of the Chief Minister's Vigilance Cell today questioned Ranjit Gogoi, Director of the Directorate of Information and Public Relations, here today in connection with a complaint pertaining to misutilisation of funds worth more than Rs 30 crore.

The five-member team is inquiring into the alleged misutilisation of funds during the Congress rule, especially towards the end of the third tenure of former Chief Minister Tarun Gogoi.

Sources said that a huge amount of money were misutilised during the 'Vision Assam', Mission Assam' programme of the erstwhile Congress government as part of which a number of advertising agencies were also roped in. (See page 4)

Ayodhya case
SC reserves order on BJP leaders

NEW DELHI, April 6: The Supreme Court today reserved its order on a petition seeking restoration of conspiracy charges against senior BJP leaders LK Advani, MM Joshi and Uma Bharti in the Babri Masjid demolition case. The apex court will also decide whether the trial of the VIPs accused can be transferred from a court in Rae Bareli to Lucknow.

There were two sets of cases relating to the demolition of the disputed structure on December 6, 1992. The first involved unnamed 'karsevaks', the trial in which is taking place in a Lucknow court, while the second set of cases relates to the VVIPs in a Rae Bareli court.

A bench comprising Justices PC Ghose and RF Nariman also indicated they may order holding of joint trial of the two sets of cases by transferring the trial from Rae Bareli to a Lucknow court. The bench also said since 25 years have already passed, in the interest of justice it will consider ordering a timebound trial on day-to-day basis, to be completed preferably within two years. - PTI

INTERNATIONAL
Trump strategist Bannon dropped from NSC

WASHINGTON, April 6: Steve Bannon, President Donald Trump's chief strategist, has lost his seat on the powerful National Security Council (NSC) in a high-level White House shakeup.

Trump's elevation of Bannon to a permanent spot on the NSC had been widely criticized as injecting politics into White House deliberations on sensitive defence, foreign policy and intelligence matters.

The move, revealed yesterday, was seen as a setback for Bannon, the controversial former head of the far-right media website Breitbart, who is one of Trump's most trusted advisers and sometimes duped the real power in the White House.

And it appeared to boost recently-appointed National Security Advisor HR McMaster, who is putting his own stamp on the crucial advisory body.

Trump made no statement on the shift, but Bannon described it as part of a process of getting the council under control after it grew rapidly under President Barack Obama's national security advisor Susan Rice.

"Susan Rice operationalized the NSC during the last administration, so I was put on NSC to ensure it was 'de-operationalised.' General McMaster has brought back Susan Rice," Bannon said in a statement.

Normally out of the news, the NSC has been the focus of uncommon controversy in the first months of the administration.

Trump's first national security advisor Michael Flynn was forced out in February after he made misleading statements about conversations he had with Russian Ambassador to Washington Michael Kislyak after the election.

The White House then struggled to replace Flynn, with potential candidates wary of political infighting and staff issues.

On February 20, Trump tapped respected Army Lieutenant General McMaster as his new national security advisor.

ISIS kills '33 men' in Syria

BEIRUT, April 6: Syrian activists say the ISIS group has killed 33 young men in eastern Syria, close to the border with Iraq. The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights says ISIS members slit the throats of the men, aged between 18 and 25, near the town of Mayadeen in Deir el-Zour province yesterday.

The group says it's not clear who the men were and whether they were Syrian troops or rebels. Opposition activist Omar Abu Laia, who is from Deir el-Zour but currently lives in Europe, also reported the killings. When it controlled the ancient Syrian city of Palmyra, ISIS carried out public beheadings, including of the antiquities chief, whose body was hung from a pole in a main square. —AP

Second day of Gunotsav

STAFF REPORTER

GUWAHATI, April 6: The second day of Gunotsav in the government LP and ME schools was celebrated today in Kamrup Metro district under the aegis of the education department in collaboration with the Kamrup Metro administration.

Senior government officials including Chief Secretary VK Pipersaria, DGP Mukesh Saikia, Additional Chief Secretary KV Eapen, Commissioner and Secretary LS Changsan, State Coordinator for NRC Prateek Hajela, Kamrup Metro Deputy Commissioner Dr M An-goothu and others visited a number of schools in the district to test the general knowledge, writing ability and numerical skills of the students.

Five IAS officers, 25 ACS officers, one IPS and IFS officer each and two APS officers, among 245 external evaluators, spent the whole day today covering 233 schools in the district.

The percentage of students present was above 91 per cent today. Evaluation of the schools in the district will end tomorrow.

In the Gunotsav 2017, a total of 708 schools are being covered in the district.

World Health Day today

STAFF REPORTER

GUWAHATI, April 6: The Regional Science Centre (RSC) Guwahati is going to celebrate World Health Day tomorrow on its premises here with a variety of participatory activities involving schoolchildren, teachers and general public.

Among the programmes scheduled for the occasion are health checkup by specialist doctors, art competition for students on topics like 'A doctor in a hospital' and 'Persons during physical exercise', poster competition, popular talk cum demonstration, open house quiz competition, science film show and prize distribution.

World Health Day is celebrated across the world every year on April 7 under the leadership of the World Health Organization (WHO) to draw the attention of people towards the importance of global health.

World Health Day celebration focuses on increasing the life expectancy by adding good health to the lives of people and promoting healthy living habits. The theme for this year is 'Depression: Let's talk'.

Freak mishap at Secretariat

STAFF REPORTER

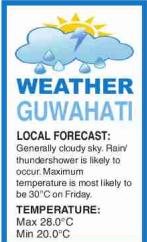

GUWAHATI, April 6: A portion of the ceiling on the second floor of the D Block in the State Secretariat here today gave in, but fortunately no one was injured.

The incident took place around 12 noon.

"A portion of the ceiling, measuring around two square feet, crumbled down in the room of the hill areas development department. Fortunately, an employee who was seated below had just moved out of the room. There was no injury to any one," an official said.

Sources said the portion of the ceiling was leaking for some time and no repair work was carried out to fix it. Such leaks had also been reported from other places in the Secretariat.

Government schools

A serious issue with wider implications for our social life that has been left unaddressed concerns the plummeting standards of government-run school education in the State. The government schools that were once synonymous with quality education witnessed a downward slide since the 1990s. The period also coincided with a growing penchant for English-medium education among the State's middle-class. The slump suffered by government schools continued, and their qualitative aspects – the real test of any education system – have not witnessed any improvement despite interventions like the Sarva Siksha Abhijan. Indeed, the falling standards of school education have been bemoaned by various periodical assessments. This means that something is drastically wrong with the manner in which education is being imparted to our schoolchildren. While a lot is often said about infrastructure and economic constraints of our schools, what has not got adequate highlight is the total lack of discipline in many of our educational institutions. When teachers' attendance is highly irregular, it does not merit any surprise that the students should also be having a similar trend in attendance.

It is against this backdrop that the State Government's initiative under 'Gumotsav' to assess the performance of government schools under various parameters assumes significance. It would definitely do a world of good to these schools if their drawbacks are correctly assessed, and more importantly, followed up with rectifying measures. It is to be noted that some glaring loopholes in the functioning of government schools have been there for all to see. For an education system to function smoothly, it is imperative that those responsible for imparting education discharge their responsibilities diligently. This is not happening in government schools which can hardly be said to be functioning professionally. No one would be questioning the rights of the teachers to have the required infrastructure at their disposal or to have their salary on time but at the same time the students also have a right to get proper education. This will be impossible unless the teachers regard their primary responsibility of teaching as something sacred and binding. With the Right to Education (RTE) Act coming into force, a lot of government interventions are forthcoming to put in place a firm educational infrastructure. The teachers, on their part, will have to complement it through a sincere and conscientious discharge of their responsibilities. The truth behind the slump in the performance of government-run schools in recent years – unpalatable as it might be to some – has been the erosion of discipline, with the teachers being largely responsible for this sorry state of affairs. A change in the mindset on the part of the teachers is certainly among the foremost needs to check the dwindling standards of education. The government-run education system presents a depressing picture, and only a professional and accountable management can enable it to compete on equal terms with the mushrooming private institutions.

Fixing culpability

Though barbarism does not lend itself to quantifiable judgement, the latest chemical attack on civilians in the Khan Sheikun area of Syria, in which over 70 people, including at least 20 children, died an agonizing death and hundreds were severely affected, must rank as one of the most barbaric acts in a war where every trace of humanity has long been obliterated. Yet, ironically, the international community has not been able to fix culpability for this horrific attack on any of the many actors in the Syrian tragedy. On one side we have Bashar al-Assad's army, backed by Russia and the Shia troops of Iran; on the other we have the Syrian rebels ostensibly backed by the US-led NATO forces as also to some extent the Arab League. Then we have the dreaded Islamic State (ISIS) which is also opposed by affected players such as Turkey. In such a multi-national whodunit scenario, though the obvious culprit might be staring us in the face, the global community, as represented by the UN, is finding it difficult to exactly identify who was responsible. Yet any neutral entity would not find it difficult to hazard a guess. In August 2013, Syrian troops had been caught using deadly Sarin gas at Ghouta near Damascus killing around 1,300 civilians, causing UN supervisors to confiscate Assad's cache of chemical weapons, a process 'completed' the following year.

Apparently, the Assad regime had not handed over the entire cache and, despite its denying responsibility each time, there have been at least three reported attacks with chemical weapons. Khan Sheikun stands between the area recuperated by the Syrian army and its new objective, the IS-held city of Idlib. Thus, it would be logical for Assad's troops to attempt to clear their way towards Idlib, even if they have to adopt horrific methods to attain their objective. However, during the debate in the UN Security Council, the Russian Ambassador had fielded a somewhat spacious explanation – the chemical weapons, according to him, had actually been stored by either the ISIS or the Syrian rebels and were released when the storage facility was hit in an airstrike! The chief of the UN Commission of Enquiry had rightly asserted that use of chemicals as well as targeting hospitals amounted to 'war crimes and serious violation of human rights laws' and 'it is imperative for perpetrators of such attacks to be identified and held accountable'. In the UN Security Council the US, UK and France have put up a draft resolution ordering the Syrian Government to hand over all flight logs, flight plans, etc., on the day of the chemical attack so that the perpetrator could be identified; yet, given that Russia and China have opposed the resolution, it is moot whether culpability for this inhuman act would ever be fixed.

Rough & Tumble

Patricia Mukhim

A lot has happened in Assam in the past week. There was the mega celebration of a socio-religious festival called Namami Brahmaputra which seemed to portend early floods this year for we are having rains every day for the past few weeks. That holy priests had to be transported all the way from Hardwar to pay obeisance to the river speaks of a new morality in India. Then we had His Holiness the Dalai Lama visiting and sharing his words of eternal wisdom at several places including the closing function of the platinum jubilee of this newspaper. Someone asked me a prescient question – Is the Dalai Lama a political activist or a religious leader? I had never really engaged with this esoteric question, hence I had no answer to give. But on a more serious note, it is out of depth for the Dalai Lama to continue pushing for the rights of his people Tibetans to remain an independent people and country? Is it wrong of him to exhort all nations of this world to be in solidarity with the Tibetan cause and to urge them to put pressure on China to give up its claim over Tibet? The other question is whether it is oxymoronic to combine religious and political leadership?

These incipient thoughts led me to read Jonathan Haidt's book, The Righteous Mind – Why Good People are Divided by Politics and Religion. In India we are schooled to believe that religion and politics are inimicable. Hence the 'secular' addendum to the Constitution in 1976! But, having added the word 'secular' to the text, neither India's Constitution nor its laws define the relationship between religion and the state. I am not sure if the ambiguity and ambivalence is intentional considering we are a country with so many religions striving for oxygen. And now we have a Hindu priest and former MP, holding the post of Chief Minister in Uttar Pradesh. So where is the dividing line between religion and politics?

What has been missing so far is the active participation of Muslim Imams, Christian priests, etc., in electoral politics. But now that Yogi Adityanath has shown the way, others may gleefully follow.

The point then is whether politics and religion make for better governance. Social psychologists, Putnam and Campbell found in their studies a correlation between religiousness and charity. Also, that while religious people give a lot to religious charities they also give as much or more to secular charities such as the American Cancer Society. And while they spend a lot of time in service to their churches and synagogues, they also spend more time than secular folks serving in neighbourhood and civic associations of all sorts.

The studies however use largely Jewish and Christian subjects who make up the bigger chunk of the American population. One wonders what the outcomes would be if Muslim and Hindu subjects too

According to him, god and religion are group level adaptations for producing cohesiveness and trust. His studies indicate that humans have an extraordinary ability to care about things beyond themselves, to circle around those things with other people and in the process to bind themselves into teams that can pursue larger projects. That, Haidt says, is what religion is all about and with a few adjustments, it's what politics is all about too. But were evaluated and if they would demonstrate similar religious cohesion and philanthropy. Also it would be interesting to know if a Christian politician relying largely on votes from his co-religionists would be committed to serve the interests of all the constituents or if he/she would give better service to those of his faith. This in essence is the problem of mixing religion and politics in a country with the religious diversity of India.

This is reinforced by what moral psychologist Jonathan Haidt says.

he wonders at the inability of religion to prevent the sharp polarization of American politics and asks, "Can't we disagree more constructively?"

In American politics, Haidt found a sharp decline in people calling themselves centrists or moderates from 40% in 2000 down to 36% in 2011 and a rise in the number of conservatives from 38% to 41% in that same decade and a corresponding rise in the number of liberals from 19% to 21%. From the 1990s, new rules and new behaviours are emerged in politics.

Friendships and social contacts across party lines were discouraged. And once these human connections were weakened, it became easier to treat members of the other party as permanent enemies rather than as fellow members of an elite club. Candidates began to spend more time and money on 'oppo' (opposition)

research, in which

staff members and paid consultants were told to dig up dirt on opponents

(sometimes illegally) and then shovel that information to the media. Haidt quotes a senior Congressman who said, "This is not a collegial body any more. It is more like gang behaviour. Members walk into the chamber full of hatred."

As a moral psychologist, Haidt argues that liberals and conservatives are like Yin and Yang. Both are necessary for a healthy state of political life. Liberals are experts in care and are better able to see and with a few adjustments, it's what politics is all about too. But improve those arrangements and invent new ones (reminds me of MGNREGA and Right to Education in India). Further, Liberals are wont to push for restraint on corporate super-organisations and they believe that some big problems can only be solved by regulation which Haidt feels are profoundly important for the health of a society.

Haidt says the inability of political ideologues of the left and right to come together is because they are blinded by a morality that binds but also blinds. Hence they fight with other if the fate of the world depended on each side winning the battle. This he says would have serious consequences for American politics.

This should make us in India reflect whether the ongoing battle between the Right and Left on almost every issue is good for this country. Is there a moral framework such as those propagated by the Dalai Lama that can push politicians to rise above ideologies and come together to work for the greater good of humanity?

STAFF REPORTER

GUWAHATI, April 6: A five-day 'Skill Development Training on Pig Farming' was organised recently by the Directorate of Extension Education, Assam Agricultural University (AAU), Khanapara, in collaboration with the Centre for Microfinance & Livelihood (CML), Guwahati.

Thirty-three educated youths and progressive farmers of five districts—Dhemaji, Bongaigaon, Chirang, Baksa, and Kamrup Metropolitan—attended the training programme. The main objective of the programme was to develop the entrepreneurial skills of the farmers and educated unemployed youths on pig farming by adoption of modern and scientific methods for enhanced production, resulting in socio-

Specially abled kids to stage Bezbaroa's play today

STAFF REPORTER

GUWAHATI, April 6: A maiden stage performance can send anybody into a tizzy, but 11-year-old Reeba Das is confident for she has overcome bigger challenges to be a part of the play, Latkan, to be staged at the Rabindra Bhawan here tomorrow evening. Narrating an inspiring tale, 15 specially abled kids will take to the stage to showcase their special skills.

The programme is being organised by Sahayika, a guidance centre for special kids, in association with the Sangeet Natak Akademi and the State Department of Cultural Affairs. The play will be staged at 6.30 pm. The children participating in Latkan, based on Rasaraj Lakshminath Bezbaroa's story, have been undergoing training for 20 days to get adapted to the stage, their roles and the audience.

"Acting can be a great therapy for such special kids who learn to communicate and break out of their shell and connect with others. This initiative is an attempt to help them assimilate socially," said Ipsita Sarma, principal of Sahayika.

Since 1986, the organisation has been helping the specially abled kids, along with providing necessary counselling to their parents and caretakers. It caters mostly to children hailing from poor to lower middle income groups.

"Latkan" has been chosen so that the children can enjoy taking part in the play due to the fun element in the story. It is indeed inspiring how the kids understand and enact their roles overcoming all odds," said Rajib Kumar Saikia, director of the play and also a special trainer.

Saud, who specializes in working with children with special abilities in the field of drama, said that acclimatization with the ambience is a must to instil in such kids an interest in acting.

"We take the help of visual aid and background sound to make the performance lively and keep the kids involved in the play. If necessary, dialogues are provided from backstage," he said.

Apart from the mentally challenged, children with autism, hearing impairment and multiple disabilities are taking part in the play.

Son of Arbinda Kalita, Dhanmani has been missing since Tuesday night and his body was found on Wednesday morning hanging from a tree near his home. Locals suspect it to be a murder case. Seven people have so far been picked up by the police for interrogation in this connection even though a suicide note was recovered. Police also conducted a search with a sniffer dog, said A Natarajan, SPDO, Barjali. — ANN Service

Security beefed up at Dhubri border areas

CORRESPONDENT

DHUBRI, April 6: In order to check the rise in crime in the border areas of the district, the police has strengthened the second line of defence in all the sensitive areas.

As per the reports, the border areas of the district frequently witness illegal cross-border activities that mostly include cattle smuggling, smuggling of narcotics, psychotropic substances and illegal infiltration of people from the neighbouring country. Police said that activities related to fake Indian currency notes and suspicious movements in these areas are also detected from time to time.

However, to make the border areas of the district free from such illegal activities, Dhubri police have deployed extra battalion forces in the sensitive areas under Souramari, Agomoni, Binachara, Jhaphabari, Nalia and Biskhowa outposts and also along the riverine outposts.

"We have deployed 49 special battalion forces at all these areas in March and since then the crime in these areas have declined drastically," said Sirazul Hoque, DSP (Border), Dhubri.

Hoque explained that main task of these forces is to strengthen the second line of defence by cooperating with the Border Security Force. He also said that these forces will go on a joint patrolling with the security forces. "Our officials have a better understanding of the demography in these areas and this has brought about necessary changes," said the DSP.

He also said that the neighbouring districts of the State and other States that share border with Bangladesh have also seen increase in border crimes in recent times. But they are different than the crime taking place in Dhubri district. He said that trade of fake Indian currency notes and cattle smuggling have recorded an escalating growth in these neighbouring border areas. "In need we will soon be increasing the man-power of such forces in these areas to make the border areas more secured and free from illegal activities," added Hoque.

ABSU, ABWWF demand judicial probe into Mainao's death

CORRESPONDENT

KALIGAON, April 6: The Udaguri district committee of All Bodo Students' Union (ABSU) and All Bodo Women Welfare Federation (ABWWF) in a joint petition to Prime Minister Narendra Modi demanded a judicial inquiry into the mysterious death of Mano Brahma (27) in Bangalore on March 21.

Daughter of Balabhadra Brahma of Goremari village in Udaguri district, she was working in JP Morgan company for last six years. Her body was found in her room in Koramongla 8th Block on March 21.

An FIR was lodged at the Koramongla Police Station on March 21 by her father against one Pradeep, suspected to be involved in killing. Unfortunately no arrest has been made so far in this connection.

The petition, signed by Rambada Daimary, ABSU Udaguri district president; Anup Daimary, secretary of ABSU Udaguri district committee; Swapna Bagyari, secretary and Maloti Basumatary, spokesperson of ABWWF Udaguri district committee; requested the PM for a high-level judicial inquiry into the mysterious death and immediate action against the accused. The petition also urged the PM to ensure safety and security of students and people of NE region staying in different parts of the country.

Himanta's effigy burnt

TINSUKIA, April 6: Demanding 100 per cent appointment of local youths in the educational institutions of the State, the Tinsukia district unit of the All Assam Model Students' Union (AAMSU) burnt the effigy of State Education Minister Himanta Biswa Sarma at Thana Chariali here on Wednesday.

It may be mentioned that several local youth and student organisations have raised their voice against the recent appointment of teachers from outside Assam in the Kendriya Vidyalaya Tinsukia.

According to the protesters, these Kendriya Vidyalayas in Assam appoint teachers from outside the State by rejecting the local candidates on flimsy grounds. According to these organisations, this practice of Kendriya Vidyalayas is nothing but an anti-Assam mindset of the administrators. — Correspondent

AAU professor nominated as IARI member

GUWAHATI, April 6: Dr Chandan Hazarika, Director of Post Graduate Studies, Assam Agricultural University, Jorhat has been nominated by the Union Ministry of Agriculture and Farmers Welfare and ICAR Society as a member of the Board of Management of the Indian Agricultural Research Institute (IARI), New Delhi for a period of two years with effect from March 20. This was stated in a press release.

Dr Hazarika has been nominated as an eminent educationist concerned with the research work of the institute. His nomination is yet another achievement for the AAU, Jorhat.

TDSU meet concludes

CORRESPONDENT

TINSUKIA, April 6: The 11th conference of the Tinsukia District Students' Union (TDSU) of the All Assam Students' Union (AASU), which began on April 1 with three-day programme at the Rajkant Bordoloi Field, Makum, has ended with the election of a new district body.

The open session, held on the last day, was attended and addressed by AASU adviser Dr Samujjal Bhattacharyya, AASU president Dipangkara Nath, general secretary Lurinjyoti Gogoi, Inspector of Schools Abdul Jelil, All Tai Ahom Students' Union (ATASU) executive president Tarango Malla Barua, All Assam Chutia Students' Union (AACSU) president Durga Konwar, besides other dignitaries.

Speaking on the Central government's move to provide citizenship to the migrant Hindu Bengalis in

Gogoi for pact with Bangladesh for deportation of infiltrators

CORRESPONDENT

JORHAT, April 6: Stressing the utmost need of a bilateral agreement between India and Bangladesh to deport the illegal migrants, former Chief Minister Tarun Gogoi said here on Wednesday that deportation of the foreigners will not be successful if the neighbouring country is not compelled through an agreement to take back their own citizens who infiltrated to Assam through the porous border.

Addressing a press conference at the Jorhat Press Club, Gogoi said the government will be able to send back the illegal migrants to Bangladesh only after signing a bilateral agreement for the deportation of the aliens who have been posing threat to the demography of the State. No such agreement was signed for the deportation purposes by any government till this period, he said.

"This is the best time to make an agreement with Bangladesh as India's relationship is with the neighbouring country is at its best now. Bangladesh must be convinced by the Central government to take back its citizens who infiltrated from that country to our State," said Gogoi.

Asked whether any illegal migrant could be returned properly to that country during his rule, the former Chief Minister said that the government agencies could not send back any illegal migrant to the neighbouring country properly even after the detection process was done under legal provisions.

"During the period of Congress government, I had strongly argued before the then Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh to make an agreement with Bangladesh government for the deportation of the illegal migrants. But, that time the relationship between the two countries was not so good and unfortunately it could not be done," said Gogoi.

He said the present Indo-Bangladesh relationship is very good for initiating the process for an agreement in this regard. He also demanded the State government to expedite the works for updating the NRC, which will help the government agencies immensely to find out the illegal migrants in the nook and corner of the State.

The former Chief Minister, however, criticised the present State government for spending a huge amount of money on the most recently celebrated Namami Brahmaputra festival. He reminded the State government of rehabilitating the families affected by the flood and erosion by Brahmaputra and its tributaries.

"I also feel the need for dredging the mighty Brahmaputra and expansion of transportation facilities in the waterways of the State. No doubt, our State is enriched with enough potential for river trade. But, is it good to spend huge amount of money from the government exchequer for paying homage to the river through songs, dance and drama?"

He said that the State government resorted to publicity only to woo the citizens of the State. "The four projects of construction of bridges on Brahmaputra, which were announced by Union Minister Nitin Gadkari on Tuesday, were proposed by me during our tenure. These are not new projects of the BJP government," he said.

Amid rain, waterlogging Gunotsav begins at Hailakandi

CORRESPONDENT

HAILAKANDI, April 6: Amid rain, thunder shower and waterlogging, Gunotsav started in Hailakandi district on Wednesday and the headmaster of 151-Rongpur Maktab LP School, Munir Uddin Barthuya, was suspended for alleged negligence of duty.

The additional deputy commissioner-in-charge of education in Hailakandi, FR Laskar, said that he found the negligence during the preparation of Gunotsav and there were also allegations against the teacher. After preliminary enquiry, he was suspended.

Gunotsav in Hailakandi district is being held in 1,520 schools along with the other districts of the State and more than 500 external evaluators are evaluating the students. The evaluators included the Deputy Commissioners, Police Super, Mission Director, Secretaries, MLAs and other different categories of officers.

Of the 1,520 schools, evaluation was conducted in 658 schools of Lala, 437 of Katcherra and 389 schools of Hailakandi education blocks on Wednesday.

The Mission Director of National Health Mission (NHM), Dr P Ashok Babu, evaluated Algapur Maktab School.

The venue of Gunotsav was shifted from at least 60 places to safe areas due to unprecedented waterlogging and damage by severe hailstorm in southern Hailakandi. The venue of Bacharkhal ME School of Hailakandi town was shifted to Rotary Club due to waterlogging in the school.

On the other hand, the district administration has started distribution of relief materials in Lalai and Katcherra blocks among the victims of hailstorm and waterlogging.

Meanwhile, a group of people blocked the PWD road under Tantoo-Niyamatpur gaon panchayat demanding the distribution of relief materials among the victims of waterlogging.

identification of district president Jagat Kalita.

BOKAKHAT, April 6: The Bokakhat district unit of the AGP has sent a letter to the BJP-led alliance government of the State to appoint equal number of leaders from AGP and BJP in the chair of the State and district-level boards, corporations, etc.

Some other important resolutions were also adopted in a meeting held under the pres-identship of district president Jagat Kalita.

The meeting resolved putting Bokakhat on the rail map considering the huge tourism potential of the Kaziranga National Park. The meeting was held at Dhamirukhola on March 28, where Rohini Bauli Sabika, DFO of KNP, delivered a speech on conservation of rhino and other wildlife species and poaching in and around KNP area. He sought cooperation from all sections of the society to stop poaching.

Dhiraj Das, SDO (Civil) of Bokakhat, appealed the villagers to extend cooperation in this regard and asked them not to give shelter to any poachers. Earlier, Bimal Chetia, SDPO of Bokakhat Subdivision, expressed the purpose of the meeting. Manik Chandra Goswami, Circle Officer, Dergaon also spoke at the meeting.

'High time for Nagas to examine Naga problem in its entirety'

CORRESPONDENT

In the State where Nagas are divided, the Chief Minister said it is unfortunate to see too many factions among the Naga underground groups.

Calling for oneness among the Nagas, the CM said shouting will not bring unity, and therefore he called upon the people to think of our children that our children should be allowed to suffer as we suffered during those turbulent decades.

Earlier, speaking during the inauguration of State Administrative building of Sengangha Higher Secondary School at Umanga village, the CM stressed that there is a need to co-operation between administration, village councils and the educational institutions to bring about quality education, Dr Shurhozelie said.

"From now on we have to start a movement to bring unity among the Nagas to achieve the ultimate goal of bringing solution to the protracted Naga political problem".

During the civic reception, the Chief Minister on seeing hundreds of school students in their uniforms became a little emotional and called upon the people to think of our children that our children should be allowed to suffer as we suffered during those turbulent decades.

Earlier, speaking during the inauguration of State Administrative building of Sengangha Higher Secondary School at Umanga village, the CM stressed that there is a need to co-operation between administration, village councils and the educational institutions to bring about quality education, Dr Shurhozelie said.

"From now on we have to start a movement to bring unity among the Nagas to achieve the ultimate goal of bringing solution to the protracted Naga political problem".

Expressing his happiness to cover Mokokchung district in his first official tour as Chief Minister, he asked parents to let their children avail the facilities at their doorsteps rather than sending them to other parts of the country for education. He reiterated that children would get quality education through the cooperation shown by the parents towards the institutions.

Noting that lack of coordination between higher and lower section in the educational institutions is a major concern which is a setback for education in the State, Shurhozelie said the Government has set up a special committee to study more about it, though it is not in favour of bifurcation.

BJP Govt bringing change in Manipur, claims CM

CORRESPONDENT

IMPHAL, April 6: Manipur Chief Minister N Biren Singh on Thursday said that the new Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP)-led coalition government has started to bring a change in Manipur.

Promising that will fully dedicate himself for the welfare of the masses, BJP's first Chief Minister in the volatile border State said, "I will work selflessly for the welfare and betterment of the people." The CM was addressing the 37th foundation day of the BJP here on Thursday.

In his speech, BJP Manipur president K Bhabaniprasad expressed the need for coordination and support between the government and party.

State Minister Thonglok and others, Thousand of devotees clad in yellow robes thronged the venue to witness the consecration ceremony by their living God.

"I was destined to be here for this momentous occasion. It is more important to be a good human being than a mere Buddhist or adherent to any faith," the Dalai Lama said in his address.

The visiting Ministers assured that necessary assistance will be provided to the affected villages.

Meanwhile, Deputy CM Yumnam Joykumar Singh distributed relief materials to the land-stripped families of Meitei Langol Yumja Manhi area in Imphal West district on Thursday.

He declared essential commodities including rice, dal, mustard oil and candles to 29 families who were affected by the recent spate of rain accompanied by hailstorm on April 2.

He further said the government is also trying to formulate a new mechanism to expect good fruits," he stated.

Banks should transmit lower cost of funds to customers, say industry chambers

NEW DELHI, April 6: As the Reserve Bank kept its key lending rate on hold, the industry today said banks should be nudged to transmit lower cost of funds to customers amid increased liquidity in the system.

Industry chambers also expect the RBI to change its policy stance going forward and effect a rate cut to refurbish business sentiment and trigger the turn of the investment cycle," Banerjee said.

Assocham President Sandeep Jajodia said the focus of the RBI appears to be on liquidity management and anchoring inflationary expectations, thus growth impetus may not be its primary area.

"In any case, with so much of surplus liquidity, the banks should be nudged further to transmit the lower cost of funds to the borrowers," Jajodia said.

"From industry's perspective, greater transmission of previous policy rate cuts and a further softening of the lending rates by banks is important as this would encourage both consumption and investment demand," FICCI President Pankaj Patel said. -PTI

RBI maintains key lending rate at 6.25%, narrows LAF corridor

MUMBAI,

April 6: With inflationary concerns in mind, the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) in its first bi-monthly monetary policy review of 2017-18 today kept its key lending rate unchanged at 6.25 per cent, saying it awaited further macroeconomic data before making any changes.

The RBI's Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) kept the reverse repo rate, or the short-term lending rate it charges on borrowings by commercial banks, unchanged for the third consecutive time at 6.25 per cent.

However, the MPC decided to narrow the policy rate corridor by 25 basis points. The corridor is the difference between the repo and reverse repo rate. A narrow corridor is expected to check money flow into the banking system and to drain out additional liquidity.

The adjustment automatically hiked the reverse repo rate under the liquidity adjustment facility (LAF) to six per cent. Conversely, RBI maintained the cash reserve ratio (CRR), or the quantum of liquid funds which commercial banks have to keep, at 4 per cent.

"Consequent upon the narrowing of the LAF corridor, the reverse repo rate under the LAF is at 6.0 per cent, and the marginal standing facility (MSF) rate and the bank rate are at 6.50 per cent," an RBI policy statement said.

"The decision of the MPC is consistent with a neutral stance of monetary policy in consonance with the objective of achieving the medium-term target for consumer price index (CPI) inflation of 4 per cent with-in a band of +/- 2 per cent, while maintaining a positive outlook for growth."

"We are hopeful that going forward the RBI would shift

its policy stance from neutral to accommodative and effect a cut in interest rates to refurbish business sentiment, support domestic demand and trigger the turn of the investment cycle," Banerjee said.

The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) left its benchmark lending rate unchanged at 6.25 per cent today for the third policy review in a row, citing risk to inflation.

CB Director General Chandrjit Banerjee said the status quo on the key lending rate is based on a cautious assessment of the upside risks to inflation while maintaining a positive outlook on growth.

"We are hopeful that going forward the RBI would shift its policy stance from neutral to accommodative and effect a cut in interest rates to refurbish business sentiment, support domestic demand and trigger the turn of the investment cycle," Banerjee said.

The RBI said risks are evenly balanced around the inflation trajectory at the current juncture.

"There are upside risks to the baseline projection," it said.

"Inflation developments have to be closely and continuously monitored, with food price pressures kept in check so that inflation expectations can be re-anchored. At the same time, the output gap is gradually closing. Consequently, aggregate demand pressures could build up, with implications for the inflation trajectory," it added.

All six members of the panel, chaired by RBI Governor Urjit Patel, voted in favour of the monetary policy decisions – the minutes of which will be released on April 20. The next meeting of the MPC is scheduled on June 5 and 6, 2017.

Supporting growth," it added.

The last policy review in February 8, 2017, while holding rates at 6.25 per cent, the Central bank had changed its policy stance from "accommodative" to "neutral".

Expectations are that the RBI will maintain status quo on rates that had been fuelled by inflation numbers, with wholesale inflation soaring to over a three-year high of 6.56 per cent in February and retail inflation climbing to 3.65 per cent due to rise in food and fuel prices.

The equity markets remained unmoved by the widely expected decision. The barometer 30-scrip sensitive index (Sensex) of the BSE traded at 39,861.07 points (at 2.30 pm).

Nagaon eye surgery mishap

State human rights panel directs probe

STAFF REPORTER

news item regarding the death of one Sonali Sarkar during a laparoscopic surgery to remove her gall bladder stone at the Khaburuddin Ali Ahmed Medical College of Barpeta and directed for a magisterial inquiry into the incident.

The Commission has sought the inquiry report along with relevant papers within 30 days of issuing the notice. It has also asked the GMCH to submit a detail report in respect of the matter within three weeks of receiving the notice.

"It was reported in the newspapers that the patient had come into coma after being administered anesthesia and due to non-availability of senior specialist at the FAU Medical College, Barpeta, she was shifted to the Gauhati Medical College & Hospital on March 29. But she died on April 2, 2017," a statement from AHRC said.

Reportedly, 13 persons underwent the surgery in the hospital's ophthalmology department from March 7 to March 10, 2017 of which, three persons lost their eyesight after contracting severe infection.

Wild elephants kill minor girl in Baksa village

BARPETA, April 6: Wild elephants from the Manas National Park-cum-Tiger Project created terror at Kabilbari Urang Chupa near Salbari in Baksa district last night killing a minor girl and injuring her sister.

The wild tuskers entered the village around 11 last night and trampled the house of one Rinnish Minj. The tuskers targeted his two daughters and killed Binita (10), while her sister Jinita has fractured one leg.

All Adiavasi Students' Association of Assam Bansbari Anchal Committee has demanded adequate compensation to the family of the victim and proper security to the people of the periphery villages of Manas National Park-cum-Tiger Project. The student leaders submitted a memorandum to the Bansbari Range Officer of Manas National Park to this effect this morning. — Correspondent

Bedi charges Puducherry Chief Secy

PUDUCHERRY, April 6: Lieutenant Governor Kiran Bedi, at loggerheads with the Congress government over transfer of a top official, today charged the UT Chief Secretary with "abetting an administrative breakdown by disregarding her 'warning' not to shift him."

"Despite my firm warning to CS by email not to rush d transfer, he did. It end rules. He abetted an admin breakdown," she tweeted.

She was referring to the March 30 order issued by Chief Secretary Manoj Parida replacing Municipal Commissioner R Chandrasekheran, whom she later reinstated after terminating the transfer order as invalid.

Bedi, who has been issuing a series of statements since then explaining her stand, said when a Chief Secretary of a Union Territory "decides to side step rules & processes to defuse lawful instructions, dependent on the case, can cause admin breakdown..."

The Lt Governor also said she met the Union Home Secretary on March 31 and discussed the issue. She later issued the directive reinstating Chandrasekharan.

Bedi also shared on Twitter two e-mails she had sent to her Secretary G Theva Neethi Dhas in which she had said the matter fell under the purview of the Lt Governor.

Raking up another issue, the former IPS officer said that as per reports of Provident Fund officials, there was "defaulter" by PSUs of Puducherry in providing fund remittances to the tune of Rs 36.23 crore. — PTI

BJP, Cong corner Kejriwal over Shunlu panel report

NEW DELHI, April 6: Seeking to corner the AAP-led Delhi government over the findings of the Shunlu Committee report, the BJP and the Congress today accused the ruling dispensation of encouraging nepotism and making "famboyan and illegal" decisions by "flouting rules".

"The BJP also demanded the "suspension" of the AAP government, which enjoys a massive mandate of 65 out of 97 seats in the Assembly, while the Congress asked Kejriwal to step down from his post immediately and demanded that the Centre initiate a CBI probe into the panel's report.

"The attempt by the Delhi government is violative of established legal and constitutional positions and we demand clarification from AAP and Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal," Union Minister Nirmala Sitharaman said referring to flagging of the Delhi government's decisions by the Committee after reviewing its 404 files.

"The Shunlu Committee report pertains very seriously to issues of propriety and making decisions on subjects wherein it (AAP government) has no role to play," she said in a press conference.

She also underlined appoint- ment of personal staff of ministers, approved foreign travels and allotment of quarters as "questionable actions" of the government as pointed out in the report.

ment of personal staff of minis- ters, approved foreign travels and allotment of quarters as "questionable actions" of the government as pointed out in the report.

"What is odd is that the Kejriwal government instead of relying to the findings of the Shunlu Committee is dubbing the Lt Governor-appointed committee as illegal," she added.

Delhi Pradesh Congress Committee chief Ajay Maken charged the AAP-led government of engaging in nepotism and corruption by allegedly allotting public land and properties to the ruling party, its MLAs and relatives and friends of state ministers.

The party has also demanded a Supreme Court-directed CBI probe against AAP.

A copy of the report in his Maken also flagged the issue of the state government

allotting a minister's bungalow

Referring to the report, he

Maken alleged the state go-

Prepare ground for better show in 2019: Shah tells cadres

NEW DELHI, April 6: BJP president Amit Shah today asked party leaders to chart a winning path for the outfit from 'Kashmir to Kanyakumari', adding that they should prepare the ground for a 'better show in 2019' and not just be satisfied with the 2014 LS results.

Addressing the BJP Parliamentary Party meeting here on its foundation day, he asked party MPs to work for strengthening the outfit in states where its reach remained limited and exhorted them to take the 'NaMo track record' of governance to the masses. He asked the MPs to ' obey with smile' the top brass' directives for events slated for the next few days — April 6, BJP's foundation day, April 14, the 21st anniversary of Dalit leader Bhim Rao Ambedkar.

The programmes will focus particularly on the states and the LS seats, where the party had not performed well in the 2014 elections so as to improve the party prospects in 2019, Shah told the leaders not to sit back with satisfaction after getting 272 seats (majority mark in the Lok Sabha) but aim for more. The BJP had won 282 seats in the 2014 polls.

"Take the NaMo role model of good governance and development to the masses... Modi had said in 2014 that the three factors of casteism, family rule and appeasement fail Indian politics. 'People had dealt a blow to these factors by voting for the BJP in 2014. They have done it again in the recent UP polls. We have vowed to rid polity of these ills,' he said. — PTI

Sena MPs' behaviour 'unacceptable'

Speaker Sumitra Mahajan

NEW DELHI, April 6: Lawmakers cannot fulfil their duties if there is ban on flying. Lok Sabha Speaker Sumitra Mahajan said today after the Lower House witnessed chaos before the issue of fly ban on Shiv Sena MP Ravinder Gaikwad.

"I am not a judge and cannot pass judgement on this issue. But, the speaker should be removed amicably," Mahajan told reporters outside Parliament.

"MPs have to come to Parliament Saturday and Sundays are off so many times. MPs have to go for meetings and it is not possible to travel by train to those places and come back."

"So one has to take flights. If there is a ban on flying, then an MP cannot fulfil his/her duty. No matter should be prolonged for so long. Whatever enquiry has to be conducted, it should be done and a conclusion should be reached," she said.

The Lok Sabha witnessed utter chaos as Shiv Sena MPs, including Union Minister Anant Geete, surrounded Civil Aviation Minister Ashok Gajapathi Raju after he refused to heed to their demand tails about the incident in the House and also asked the fly ban be revoked, the Speaker said.

The civil aviation minister said rules are same for everybody, including MPs. But, everyone was angered as they were expecting a solution from the minister, Mahajan said.

"That is why there was a chaos. I addressed the House as I could not understand anybody's point."

"Later, all of us sat together. It was decided that the issue cannot be resolved in Parliament. It will be resolved only after both the sides discuss the matter," she said.

After the meeting with the Speaker, TDP as well as Shiv Sena leaders met separately to discuss the matter.

Earlier, Gaikwad tendered an apology to Parliament but insisted that he owed no apology to the airline officials as he sought removal of the ban imposed on him by domestic airlines after he allegedly beat up an Air India officer with slippers. — PTI

Fight against graft to continue: Modi

SAHIBGANJ (Jharkhand), April 6: Prime Minister Narendra Modi today said the fight against corruption and black money will continue. "Corruption and black money have destroyed the Indian democracy, eating into it like a termite. But due to your blessings, the fight against corruption and black money will continue," Modi said here.

During his interaction with some youths, the Prime Minister said the new generation wants to work with honesty and it is a good indication. Pointing out that it would be 75 years in 2022 since India got the Independence, Modi said if every person in the country takes a step ahead in all these five years, then the country would move at least 125 steps forward towards development.

Modi, who symbolically gave away a few smart phones to sakhis (mandal self-help groups) as part of the Raghubir Das government's decision to give one lakh smart phones to SHGs, said he was surprised when he got the right answers from the villagers of remote areas about the usage of smart phones.

The Prime Minister said he would go back to Parliament and tell his colleagues, who had criticised as how could the poor learn about smart phones, about this unique experience. Modi gave away the appointment letters to the personnel of Adinjanji Battalion and praising their confidence, said they would become a new strength to the security apparatus of the state. — PTI

Loss of sleep in the elderly may increase the risk of developing a wide range of mental and physical disorders, such as Alzheimer's disease, say scientists who claim that deep slumber can act as a fountain of youth in old age.

Sleep & health span

Deep sleep may act as fountain of youth in old age, say experts

As we grow old, our nights are frequently plagued by bouts of wakefulness, bathroom trips and other nuisances as we lose our ability to generate the deep, restorative slumber we enjoyed in youth, researchers said.

They reviewed studies which show that the ageing brain has trouble generating the kind of slow brain waves that promote deep curative sleep, as well as the neurochemicals that help us switch safely from sleep to wakefulness.

Though older people are less likely than younger adults to notice and/or report mental fogginess and other symptoms of sleep deprivation, poor sleep leaves them cognitively worse off, researchers said.

The shift from deep, consolidated sleep in youth to fitful, dissatisfaction sleep can start as early as the 30s, paving the way for sleep-related cognitive and physical ailments in middle age.

The study was published in the journal Neuron.

"The parts of the brain deteriorating earliest are the same regions that give us deep sleep," said Bryce Mander from the University of California (UC) Berkeley in the US.

Aging typically brings on a decline in deep non-rapid eye movement (NREM) or "slow wave sleep", and the characteristic brain waves associated with it, including both slow waves and faster bursts of brain waves known as "sleep spindles", researchers said.

Youthful healthy slow waves and spindles help transfer memories and information from the hippocampus, which provides the brain's short-term storage, to the prefrontal cortex, which consolidates the information, acting as the brain's long-term storage.

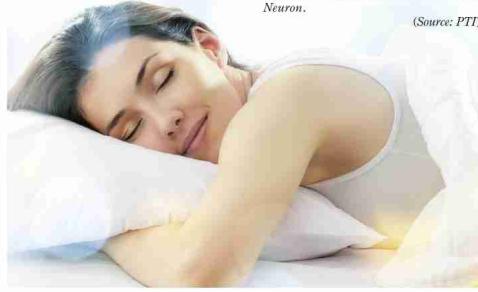

"Sadly, both these types of sleep brain waves diminish markedly as we grow old and we are now discovering that this sleep decline is related to memory decline in later life," said Joseph Winer of UC Berkeley.

"Nearly every disease killing us in later life has a causal link to lack of sleep," said Matthew Walker, professor at UC Berkeley. "We have done a good job of extending life span, but a poor job of extending health span. We now see new and improving sleep, as a new pathway for helping remedy that," he said.

Unlike more cosmetic markers of ageing, such as wrinkles and grey hair, sleep deterioration has been linked to conditions such as Alzheimer's disease, heart disease, obesity, diabetes and stroke, researchers said.

The study was published in the journal Neuron.

Know your DAY

JACQUELINE BIGAR

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, April 7, 2017:

This year you open up to many new approaches and solutions. You learn to appreciate the fact that you might not be right all the time, or rather, that some people are just more knowledgeable about certain topics than you are. You also learn to become more accepting. Now through September, an excuse to meet someone with whom a close bond is possible. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy a much better relationship with greater understanding. You often can be found chatting away the day together. You're very busy.

The Stars Show the Way: How You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Possessive; 3-Average; 2-Sophisticated; 1-Difficult.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

* Your spontaneity transforms a personal matter, allowing you to focus more on work or/and normal daily issues. You can brainstorm all you want, but your energy levels mark your interactions. You might be slowing down. That's "weekend" tonight. Meet up with friends.

Taurus (April 20-May 19)

* Know that you need to clear out some work and hassles before the weekend. Take news with a grain of salt, especially if it affects your ability to get things done quickly. Invite friends to join you later in the afternoon. That's "dinner" tonight. Discuss the week's news.

Gemini (May 20-June 20)

* You could be in a situation where feel as if an area of your life is out of control. You seem to be putting out one fire after another. Be easy on yourself, and refuse to let anyone pressure you into resuming various tasks. Tonight: Meet up with some friends over dinner.

Cancer (June 21-July 22)

* Keep communicating more of what you feel. Others will hear you and respond. You might be more upbeat than you have been in a while. Though you might be clearing out a responsibility or two, do not forget to return several important ones. Tonight: Hang out at a favorite haunt.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22)

* You generally are a bit flabby. You could be winding down from one of those periods in which you really put yourself out. Slow down and make it C.R.O. not Mr. or Mrs. Personality today. Tonight: Take some much-needed personal time for yourself.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

* You feel energized and content. In fact, though you often step back and play a less dominant role, this pattern will not hold true today. You will succeed by putting your best foot forward. Know that you are on the way to a success. Tonight: Do what you want.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

* Use today to wrap up some projects; however, if you feel uncertain about something, don't hesitate to ask questions and get some feedback. Time is your friend; you can let these projects stay on the back burner a little longer. If need be: Tonight: Keep it intimate and quiet.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

* Wherever you go, you are greeted as if you are the most honored guest. People surround you. Some of them want to share their ideas, while others might just ask a question or two. A brainstorming session is likely to be an upbeat affair. Tonight: Celebrate the moment.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 20)

* You have been eying an important matter closely, and you have looked at the issue several different ways. The time has come to take a stand. You might not get others to head in the direction you desire, but you will energize the moment. Tonight: Among the crowds.

Capricorn (Dec. 21-Jan. 19)

* You might be in the mood to initiate some unusual changes. Share your ideas with several people whom you respect and from whom you would like to get feedback. You might not be seeing all the opportunities that are available to you. Where you can listen to music.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

* A partner often voices his or her concern about your choices. Though you might feel as if you are being criticized, this person really does want the best for you. Try not to personalize anyone's comments. Tonight: Evaluate the quality of a longtime friendship or relationship.

Pisces (Feb. 19-Mar. 20)

* The Moon in your opposite sign promises many admirers and sudden flirtations, though you probably aren't considering what you want in a relationship. Others find you to be receptive yet challenging, in that when you believe something, you are hard to budge. Tonight: T.G.I.F!

Thought for the Day

A tool is but the extension of a man's hand, and a machine is but a complex tool. He that invents a machine augments the power of a man and the well-being of mankind.

US says N Korea strategic liability for China

WASHINGTON, April 6: North Korea is now a "strategic liability for China" and could disrupt the stability in the region, the White House has said after Pyongyang fired a ballistic missile into the Sea of Japan.

The remarks come ahead of the crucial meeting between President Donald Trump and his Chinese counterpart Xi Jinping at Mar-a-Lago in Florida this week. North Korea would be a prominent topic in the meeting.

"It is now quite clearly a strategic liability, and it is one that is having an impact on the region. It is one that has the potential to destabilise not only the peninsula but really the region as a whole," Matt Pottinger, Senior Director for Asia at the National Security Council at the White House told reporters at a news conference yesterday.

"In terms of an area of co-operation, of course we would like to see China working closely with the United States to address the menace emanating from North Korea—their weapons programs, the provocations that we're seeing every week; missile launches, including one that we just had not too many hours ago," he said.

"I think it's in Beijing's interest. I think that North Korea long ago ceased to be a strategic asset for China," he added.

The news conference was also addressed by Susan Thornton, Acting Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, who said that the time to hold talks with North Korea is over.

"Strategic patience has run out. This problem has really become very urgent, and it is, destabilising to the entire region and actually further than the region now, reaches across the globe with the progress that North Korea is making in developing an intercontinental ballistic missile," she said. — PTI

Suu Kyi denies ethnic cleansing in Myanmar

LONDON, April 6: Aung San Suu Kyi has denied the ethnic cleansing of Myanmar's Muslim minority, speaking to the BBC after the UN rights council agreed to investigate allegations against the army.

"I don't think there is ethnic cleansing going on. I think ethnic cleansing is too strong an expression to use for what is happening," Suu Kyi said in the interview televised yesterday.

Her one-year-old government has faced international condemnation for the treatment of the country's Rohingya Muslims, who are regarded as illegal immigrants from Bangladesh, prompting the UN rights council to agree last month to launch an investigation into violations against the minority. The Geneva-based body's fact-finding mission will examine allegations of torture, murder and rape allegedly committed by troops.

Suu Kyi told the BBC there was "a lot of hostility" in the western state of Rakhine, where more than one million Rohingya live.

"It is Muslims killing Muslims, as well, if they think they are collaborating with authorities.

"It is not just a matter of ethnic cleansing. It is a matter of people on different sides of a divide, and this divide we are trying to close up. As best as possible and not to widen it further," she said.

Myanmar has launched its own domestic probe into possible crimes in Rakhine and appointed former UN chief Kofi Annan to head a commission tasked with healing long-communing divisions between Buddhists and Muslims.

Suu Kyi said the army was "not free to rape, pillage and torture".

"They are free to go in and fight. And of course, that is in the constitution... Military matters are to be left to the army," she said, adding that she aimed to amend the constitution.

Almost 75,000 people from the persecuted minority have escaped to Bangladesh after the military launched operations in the north of Rakhine state to find Rohingya militants who raided police border posts in October. — AFP

Hindus will witness decline in births between 2055-'60

WASHINGTON, April 6: Hindus will witness a "dramatic" drop-off in births between 2055 and 2060 due to declining fertility in India, which is home to 94 per cent of the community's global population, according to a new Pew research.

The Pew Research Centre study also said that the number of babies born to Muslim women is expected to overtake those born to Christians world-wide within two decades, making Islam the world's largest religion by 2075.

Beyond 2015, Christian and Muslim mothers are expected to give birth to increasing numbers of babies through 2060.

But Muslim births are projected to rise at a faster rate – so much so that by 2035 the number of babies born to Muslim mothers will narrowly surpass the number born to Christian mothers. Between 2055 and 2060, the birth gap between the two groups is expected to approach 6 million (232 million births among Muslims vs. 226 million births among Christians).

By contrast, the total number of births

Muslim births are projected to rise at a faster rate – so much so that by 2035 the number of babies born to Muslim mothers will narrowly surpass the number born to Christian mothers is projected to decline steadily between 2015 and 2060 for all other major religious groups, said the study, which was released yesterday.

"The drop-off in births will be especially dramatic for Hindus – who are expected to see 33 million fewer births between 2055 and 2060 than between 2010 and 2015 – due in large part to declining fertility in India, which is home to 94 per cent of the global Hindu population as of 2015," according to the study titled 'The Changing Global Religious Landscape'. — PTI

Time to re-think support: US warns Russia

WASHINGTON, April 6: US Secretary of State Rex Tillerson today warned Russia to re-think its support to the Bashar al-Assad regime in Syria after a suspected chemical weapons attack on Khan Sheikhoun town left 86 people dead.

"There's no doubt in our mind that the Syrian regime under the leadership of Bashar al-Assad is responsible for ■ Syrian regime this horrific attack, and the Russians really need to think carefully about their continued support of the Assad regime," he told reporters at the State Department here.

Last week Tillerson had said that the exit of Assad's government from Syria was not a priority for America.

However the use of chemical weapons on the people of Syria has changed the view of the Trump Administration.

Earlier, President Donald Trump said the suspected "horrible" chemical attack cannot be tolerated and it has crossed "many many lines".

He indicated to adopt a much tougher approach against the authoritarian Syrian regime, but did not give any indication of what steps plans to take after the chemical attacks against innocent people.

"They are free to go in and fight. And of course, that is in the constitution... Military matters are to be left to the army," she said, adding that she aimed to amend the constitution.

The Secretary will travel to Moscow, Russia on April 12, where he will meet with Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov and other Russian officials to discuss the Ukraine, counter-terrorism efforts, bilateral relations and other issues, including the DPRK (North Korea) and Syria. "State Department's acting spokesman Mark Toner said in a statement.

"This trip is part of an effort to maintain direct lines of communication with senior Russian officials and to ensure the US' views are clearly conveyed, including on next steps in Minsk implementation," Toner said.

The death toll from Tuesday's attack on the rebel-held Syrian town has risen to 86, 30 of them children. — PTI

S Korea test fires 800-km range missile

SEOUL, April 6: South Korea has successfully test-fired a home-developed ballistic missile with a range long enough to hit any part of North Korea, Yonhap news agency reported today.

It comes a day after the North fired its own ballistic missile into the Sea of Japan – which analysts dubbed a warning ahead of a China-US summit, at which Pyongyang's accelerating atomic weapons programme is set to top the agenda.

South Korea is protected under an American security umbrella and is home to thousands of US troops.

But in 2012 it reached an agreement with the United States to almost double the range of its ballistic missile systems to guard against the North's nuclear threats, and has since been developing missiles with longer ranges.

Citing a high-ranking government official, Yonhap said the South's missile with a range of 800 kilometres (500 miles) could serve as a strong deterrent to Pyongyang.

"The test-firing was successful", the official was quoted as saying.

A defence ministry spokesman declined to comment.

The South plans to deploy the new missile this year following further tests to determine its reliability, Yonhap said.

The new missile could cover all of North Korea even when fired from a southern region of the country, it said.

In June last year, the South successfully test-fired two home-developed missiles capable of carrying a one-tonne payload up to 500 kilometres.

Pyongyang's nuclear weapons programme is likely to dominate when US President Donald Trump meets China's leader Xi Jinping at his Mar-a-Lago estate in Florida Thursday, their first face-to-face meeting. — AFP

Morata helps Madrid keep Messi-inspired Barca in check

MADRID, April 6: Alvaro Morata scored twice as Real Madrid maintained a two-point lead over Barcelona at the top of La Liga by making light of Cristiano Ronaldo and Gareth Bale's absence in a 4-2 win at Leganes.

Earlier yesterday, Lionel Messi's double on his return from suspension and Luis Suarez's stunning overhead kick helped Barcelona sweep aside Seville 3-0.

Madrid boss Zinedine Zidane gambled on the strength of his squad ahead of a mammoth 18 days which sees the European champions welcome Atletico Madrid and Barcelona to the Santiago Bernabeu and also meet old foes Bayern Munich in the Champions League quarterfinals.

However, the Frenchman was rewarded as the likes of Marco Asensio, James Rodriguez and Morata took their chance to shine.

As well as their slender lead, Real also have a game in hand over Barcelona.

"It is not taking a risk. I have a great squad," said Zidane.

"I always asked about the reserves and the starters, but we are all in the same boat.

We are doing great things together, but we will have a long way to go and we will need every player."

Asensio's storming run set up the opener for Rodriguez on 15 minutes as he weaved past three Leganes defenders before squaring for the Colombian to tap home his sixth goal of the season.

Morata's looping header and then calm finish into the top corner from Mateo Kovac-ic's pass looked to have put

Madrid out of sight inside 23

minutes.

Yet, on Real's first ever La

Liga visit to Butarque, the hosts had something to celebrate before half-time as Neves took advantage of fore-half.

The visitors quickly restored their two-goal cushion

just three minutes into the second-half, though, when

Leganes captain Martin Man-tovany contrived to punch the ball into his own net.

At the Camp Nou, Messi

looked rested rather than rusty after being banned for his last two outings for club and country as he took his tally for the season to 43 goals in 41 games.

Sevilla's visit offered boss

Jorge Sampaoli a final chance to make his case for the Barca job at the end of the season.

But defeat continues Sevilla's slide and a sixth straight game without a win sees them remain three points behind

Atletico Madrid in the battle for third place.

Messi fired an early warning as he blasted a shot off the underside of the bar to outside the area after just three minutes.

Messi doubled his tally for the night six minutes later when he volleyed home a loose ball inside the Sevilla area.

"The way the ball fell I had no other option. As a striker you have a notion of where the goal is and if I managed to help the team to win," Suarez told

BeIN Sports.

Barca's star front three were all involved for their second on the counter-attack as Suarez turned Neymar's cross back into Messi's path to slot low past Sergio Rico.

Jayaram enters quarterfinals of Malaysia Open

KUCHING (Malaysia), April 6: India's Ajay Jayaram today entered the quarterfinals of the Malaysia Open Super Series with a hard-fought victory over Denmark's Viktor Axelsen in a men's singles match here.

The unseeded Jayaram stunned Axelsen, seeded fourth, 9-21, 21-14, 21-19 in a match that lasted 44 minutes at the Stadium Perpaduan.

Jayaram will next clash with fifth-seeded Son Wan Ho of South Korea.

After going down tamely in the opening game, Jayaram got his act together to take an early lead in the second game and jump to 8-3.

He continued to maintain his lead until the Danish caught up with him at 11-11. But the lad from Chennai managed to break away at 12-12, reeling off six straight points to make it 18-12. He eventually sealed 21-14 to take the match to the decider.

Despite starting off well in the third game and having a slight edge till the break, Jayaram conceded the advantage. And what followed was a neck-and-neck battle from 12-12 to 18-18.

However, the Indian managed to hold on to his nerves to earn two quick points and move up to 20-18 before wrapping up the game in style at 21-19, and with it the match. - PTI

PV Sindhu reaches World No. 2 ranking

NEW DELHI, April 6: Rio Olympics silver medalist PV Sindhu jumped three places to achieve a career-best world number two ranking in the latest Badminton World Federation (BWF) rankings released today.

The 21-year-old shuttler from Hyderabad became only the second Indian woman after Saina Nehwal to break into the top-five of the world rankings.

She superseded Japan's Akane Yamaguchi to make the number two spot.

Sindhu had recently bagged the India Open title after defeating Carolina Marin of Spain in the summit clash, but lost in the opening round of the ongoing Malaysia Open Super Series in Kuching.

Saina who also lost in the first round of the Malaysia Open, however, lost a place to be ninth position in the ranking table with 64279 points.

The women's singles chart is led by Tai Tzu Ying of Chinese Taipei with 87911 points.

India rise to 101 in FIFA rankings

NEW DELHI, April 6: The Indian football team achieved its best-ever FIFA ranking in over two decades as it jumped to 101 in the latest release today.

This is the team's best-ever ranking since May 1996 – it was ranked 101 then also.

India have jumped 31 places from its last rank of 132nd in the previous month. Following a couple of wins in recent times, India are now ranked 11th in Asia.

The highest FIFA ranking achieved by India ever is 94, which was attained in February 1999. India were ranked 99 in November 1998 and 100 in October 1993, December 1998 and April 1996. The last couple of years had been fruitful for India as they won 11 of their 13 matches, including 10 in qualifiers while scoring a total of 31 goals. India recently posted a 1-0 victory over Myanmar in the AFC Asian Cup qualifiers – their first-ever in Myanmar in over 64 years.

Before that India's first win in an away encounter in over a decade came when they beat Cambodia 3-2 in an International Friendly. The 4-1 win at home for India last year against Puerto Rico was also commendable.

"It has been a difficult road. Bringing in new blood and competing for places in the team has been a process, and I'm pleased we are moving in the right direction,"

India coach Stephen Constantine said.

"It's been a total come-back. Unless Mr Patel (AIFF President Praful Patel) and Mrs (AIFF General Secretary Kusum Dhasi) allowed me to do the things and the manner I wanted to be done, this won't have been possible ever. I also need to thank the support staff for their commitment for the team," he added. - PTI

Lions look for winning start against Knight Riders

RAJKOT, April 6: A top-heavy Gujarat Lions would look to better their debut season's success and aim for a winning start against two-time champions Kolkata Knight Riders in an Indian Premier League match, here tomorrow.

Gujarat Lions were the top-toppers at the end of the league stage in the last IPL, but finished third after defeats in the two Qualifiers against Royal Challengers Bangalore and Sunrisers Hyderabad.

But this time around, the Lions side would look to go one step up in their second season of the IPL.

Gujarat Lions boast of a robust batting line-up and were the only team last year to score 70 or more in the powerplay were the most for bowler in 2016, and he concluded well with Praveen.

But this time around, the Lions side would look to go one step up in their second season of the IPL.

Gujarat Lions batsmen – Raina, Aaron Finch, Brendon McCullum, Darren Bravo, Trent Boult, Fiyush Chawla, Nathan Coulter-Nile, Colin de Grandhomme, Rishabh Pant, Shreyas Gopal, Shubhman Gill, Jaggi Kuidelap Yadav, Chris Weales, Chris Lynn, Sunil Narine, Marish Pandy, Yusuf Pathan, Ankit Rajput, Suryakumar Yadav, Robin Uthappa, Umesh Yadav, Nitish Rana, Suresh Raina, Shreyas Iyer and Krunal Pandya – were among the likes of Jason Roy and fully fit Mustafizur joins them then it won't be easy getting runs against them.

Bangalore were definitely handicapped by the absence of three of their heavy run scorers of last season, Virat Kohli, AB de Villiers and KL Rahul but Hyderabad had managed to come back from their skipper just to get a few brownie points back home is stupidity at its stupidest.

Every team will want to get to the kind of start that the Bangalore boys did, for then it is easy to keep the momentum going rather than play catch up after losing the first few games.

The Gujarat team had done brilliantly last year under Suresh Raina till they faced the knock-out stage and thus far Raina has been a massive role to play for the Knight Riders.

Most teams prefer to chase in the IPL but as we saw in Hyderabad the team will be out with he will have a massive role to play for the Knight Riders.

Over the last couple of Davis Cup ties involving India, the focus has been centred around Paes going past Nicolás Sriram Balaji in the second round doubles tie and lock horns with Farook Dostov and Sanjar Fayzayev at the Karnataka State Tennis Association.

Bopanna is ranked 24th in the world, 29 spots above Olympic medallist and multiple Grand Slam winner Paes (53rd).

Ramkumar Ramanathan will spearhead India's singles challenge in place of injured Yuki Bhambhani. Ramanathan will face Temur Ismailov in the first singles rubber tomorrow.

Praneeth Gunneswaran, who replaced the injured Bhambhani, will take on Farook Dostov in the second singles rubber.

In the reverse singles on Sunday, Ramanathan could face Fayzayev and Gunneswaran will be playing the final rubber against Ismailov.

Justifying his decision to pick Bopanna over Paes, Bhupathi may have been a factor in his omission. It was the seasoned Rohan Bopanna, who has made the cut, despite Paes winning a Challenger title in Mexico only a few days back.

BENGALURU, April 6: Long-serving Leander Paes was today dropped for the first time in 27 years from India's Davis Cup squad as non-playing captain Mahesh Bhupathi picked Rohan Bopanna instead for the tie against Uzbekistan.

The Asia/Oceania Zone Group I tie between India and Uzbekistan will begin on Sunday, April 9.

The stars shine down

Depression is real, and it is okay to talk about it, writes Rini Barman.

There was a time, not many years ago, when sons would have androgynous names. The names of flowers, creepers, plants, organs, idiosyncrasies and even diseases. I am sitting by the window on a sultry day as I begin to count them all. Some faint memories pass by – that of a school mate called Ananya whom everyone mistook to be a girl. In his solid defense, he used to say, "Thank goodness, an Akar matra missed me by a whisker!"

The grown-up in me has come to see this as more of a paradox. Calling your son with a female name and tormenting him till he internalizes that everything he does must give away his gender. More precisely, his 'masculinity'. Rebuke him if he tries his hand in doing the chores and he gives it up for all his life.

As per popular opinion, it was considered 'unfortunate' that such a man had to bear daughters in the future, not one, but three. I was told the first one died under unexplainable circumstances. Not that I did not manage to do my research, but as far middle-class families of the '90s go, my queries were dismissed as 'gibberish'.

I did not really miss having an elder sibling in the conventional sense. My younger sister was around to help me out. A quieter and calmer person, she loved to sing and dance as a child. She fancied and emulated the stars of cinema – just name it and she already had an act to put up.

Most of our tender young days were spent at the university campus. We had our own get-togethers, full of 'not-very-bright' friends. Most of the parents were reputed university professors, who had little to no time for passions of any kind. Passions were seen as an auxiliary, a leisurely pursuit. And so, we all grew up having academic degrees only to realize that the distance from the activities we really enjoyed doing did more harm than good. Those far more vulnerable than us lost their passions forever.

Twenty years later, whenever I walk into that same campus and meet older uncles/aunts, I am bewildered at how much is unchanged. "So now you must be earning a lot?" "So, where are you tying the knot?" When my answer turns out to be unsatisfactory, this was often the reply, "Pagol nehi?" Are you mad? Is your sister like this as well?

Across most 19th century literary texts, the construction of madness is seen as a way of approaching human fears and anxieties. To label one mad, allowed powerful people to eliminate eccentricity/aberration/perversion/subversion in social behaviour. The 'madwoman' was twice much feared; she embodied all that was 'dark' and unacceptable in the female sex (Remember Bertha Mason from Jane Eyre). These notions left their mark on how mental illness is treated and socially perceived, even to this day. Instead of a healthy discussion, all we pander to are prejudices, stereotypes and labels.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) has declared that the number of people living with mental illnesses like depression increased by more than 18 per cent between 2005 and 2015. Given the kind of ignorance around this subject, the number is appalling. When one is physically unwell, we do acknowledge the need for treatment but somehow treating matters of the mind, or even talking about it among elders is a taboo. It is unfair and such an attitude has persisted to ignore the seriousness of it all.

We forget to see how within educational spaces the stigmatization continues. Or, to put it more accurately, the majority is so accustomed to dealing with 'normal' people that anybody who deviates from that 'normalness' comes under suspicion. Among most classmates, friends, seeing the counsellor would be the butt of most jokes. "So and so is mental". "She's nuts mental questions".

Thankfully, we had an excellent counsellor. Years later, I read her book A School Counsellor's Diary with much fondness. An important diary to give you company when you have none, I would say. It is intense and detailed – 34 case studies bringing you the complexity of adolescence and the depths of the mind.

Every act of recovery comes with an act of acknowledgement. Why can't we acknowledge that something is terribly wrong with the fast, neo-liberal economy that children are told to aspire to? Why can't we see the patterns of the sheer number of increase in student suicides over the last few years? Human bodies and minds do not exist in a vacuum, they respond to the exterior world in distinctive ways.

The way we see ourselves in the society gets decided when we are named – a certain gender, religion, family. But we must not see this 'naming' as an end in itself – our identities are far more complicated and fluid. In fact, we must continually resist being pinned down to one label. If we are to approach mental health as sensitive citizens, this will be the first step. Only then can we help those who need us.

When my sister and I go back to our eight-year old selves, we find ourselves in gardens trying to pluck baby eggplants with our mother. It must have been a Sunday. We kept on telling her to stop over-working and let father do some chores but she refused to pay any heed. "Habits are tough to change," she had screamed.

Sometimes, when father is not being 'himself', an alternative reality is easy to imagine. Like Ananya, my school mate, he, too, shares a female name and exhibits similar vulnerabilities. He is a workaholic dictated by the 19th century clock. He believes only competition can save us from all illnesses.

"We will all get there someday, at our own pace," I tell him. "We need not cut our throats over that."

Like many Darwinian parents who are yet to appreciate 'wayward' children, he turns a deaf ear. As days pass by, I begin to feel more and more invincible and aware of our collective strength – as female siblings, as women who are not perfect, and as dreamers who will see the stars again.

The call of the entrepreneur

Ankur Bora

Ofentimes, we have a tendency to daydream – we wonder soaring through the sky, we imagine being cathartic and powerful. However, most often, we remain on the edge, never taking that leap of faith. On the other hand, there are individuals who have the audacity to jump off the cliff, and who risk everything to follow their dreams. And even if they fall, they have the tenacity to get up, dust off, and take the next venture with renewed energy. They are entrepreneurs, who play the most important role in the economic expansion of a country. They are instrumental in product innovations; they employ or create new technology and, thus, bring tremendous economic growth.

The extraordinary growth enjoyed over several decades by many East Asian countries has amounted to nothing less than an economic miracle. These countries, including Taiwan, Japan and South Korea invested heavily in human capital, which transformed East Asia into the economic juggernaut that it is today. I have always been captivated by these so called 'Asian Tigers' – how these once poorest countries emerged amongst the world's most productive and richest economies. My quest led me to a young Assamese who has been working on research involving the economics of these countries.

Dr Rupakjyoti Borah who is currently a visiting research fellow at the Institute of South Asian Studies, Singapore, is an expert in International Relations. Rupak has conferred the prestigious Australian Studies Fellowship when he was at the Department of Geopolitics and International Relations, Manipal University, India. Prior to that, he was a visiting Fellow at the Centre of International Studies, University of Cambridge, UK in 2009 and holds a PhD from the School of International Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University (JNU), New Delhi. Rupak has delivered lectures at various international conferences and has published extensively in journals, books, magazines, newspapers and websites, both in India and abroad.

A world away from a small town in Assam where he grew up, Rupak regularly interacts with select international leaders, military heads, academics and policy-makers from all over the world. Between the books and papers, what distinguishes him from others, as I realise, is his worldview. "When I was in school, I used to cycle, maybe 14 kms (two-ways), to my maternal uncle's house just to watch BBC." That spark for learning and innovation is exactly what he had observed when Rupak was working in Taiwan, a country which went from the lowest tier of poorest countries into a hi-tech powerhouse, making most of the world's laptops and much of its other consumer electronics.

The willingness to change and a strong entrepreneurial spirit has helped Taiwan transform itself, despite its small population. As Taiwan's embryonic development began to unfold, thousands of youths, and that does include women, began to set up one-man or youth-partnership companies. Rupak, who spent several years in Taiwan, had a prime seat in witnessing the miraculous growth of that country. He made a brilliant observation in his article 'A Year in Taiwan'. The people of Taiwan value hard work, patience, humility, friendliness and respect for others and their positive attitude, particularly amongst the young, towards entrepreneurial effort, are enormously beneficial to its economic achievements. Writing from his firsthand experiences, Rupak described how Taiwan, a tiny nation, became one of the richest economies in the world.

How Japan rebuilt itself and became an advanced nation and a major economic power in the aftermath of the World War II is a miracle. In the 1940s, start-ups like Sony and Honda helped Japan rise from the ashes of war. Self-reliance, infrastructure, free trade and entrepreneurial profits were keys to Japan's progress. For Japanese students choosing to become an entrepreneur is more common as a career option. When people are free, the Japanese believe, "there is nothing in the world that can withstand man's courage and intellect". Rupak has recently been working as a Research Fellow at the Tokyo-based Japan Forum for Strategic Studies and found a great deal of interest with Japanese people and their culture of being industrious, efficient, committed, disciplined and dedicated to work. In his recently published book, The Elephant and the Samurai, Rupak takes readers through the close historical ties between Japan and India, how expanding bilateral economics and people-to-people relations can be an extraordinary positive force for job creation, growth, harnessing science, technology and enhanced prosperity for both counties.

The world is entering into an era of international integration, technical diffusion, foreign trade and investment – this powerful force of globalisation continues to inspire Dr Rupakjyoti Borah. As he studies these areas of research, he also urges Assamese youths to leverage the unique aspects of our culture, entrepreneurial skills and competencies and doing things that have never been done before.

Priyanka Rajkhowa

Recently when I visited Shillong, I saw a group of young people crowding a corner of the Police Bazaar area. I moved closer just to find out what the mélée was about, and to my surprise I found that the crowd had gathered there to buy DVDs of TV shows. Even I joined the group, looking for a favorite series from among all the DVDs spread all over the roadside. Next to me stood a child of around eight years, and he was busy looking for City Hunter – a famous Korean action drama. As he continued his search, he asked me who my favorite Korean TV hero was, and also informed me about his craze for Korean shows. I also heard another young man asking the seller whether he had any romantic series with him. I could make out that the craze and love for foreign TV serials was growing by the day.

From Office, Office, Sarabhai vs. Sarabhai to F.R.I.E.N.D.S., the craze for television dramamas are the recent favorite among viewers.

I have always wondered if it is only me who develops a compulsion after watching the first episode of any drama, so much so that I cannot wait for the next episode. But to my amazement, I have found the same kind of 'addiction' amongst my friends as well. To avoid such a compulsion, most fans download the series online, and then the computer is not supposed to be shut down as we watch one episode after the other, on the go. From weeping at an emotional scene from Boys Over Flower, to making us feel like we are at Winterfell, or building up hatred for King Joffrey, or supporting our favorite houses while watching Game Of Thrones, TV shows are gaining a loyal viewership across countries.

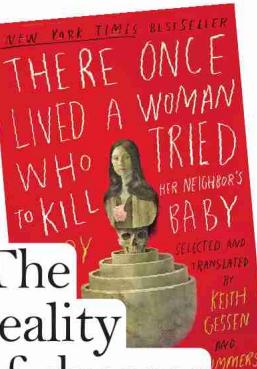

As far as Indian viewership is concerned, the monotony of Indian daily soaps has hugely shifted the audiences, especially the younger groups, to develop keen interest in foreign TV dramas. Be it Pakistani, Korean, Turkish, Iranian or American TV, they all have a growing number of Indian viewers. We are exposed to international content through channels like Zindagi, which helps our audience view daily soaps from different countries. Pakistani series like Aun Zara, Zindagi Gulzar Hain, Wat Ne Kya Kya Haseen Sitam, Humsafar, Azad Ki Aegegi Baraat, Turkish series Fatmagül, Feriha, Little Lord, Korean series named Descendants of the Sun are some of the best international television dramas broadcast by Zindagi.

TV dramas from different countries have helped connect with different audiences from different cultures. We get to know so much more about their habits, their food, their daily lives, et al. In fact, Korean shows have hugely influenced the fashion scene in the Northeast of India. Meanwhile, the Pakistani shows are emotionally stirring accounts that touch our soul, quite unlike the weepie sagas on Indian television.

Right now, though, most TV fans are waiting eagerly for the seventh season of Game of Thrones. And we are also pretty psyched about the news that Sarabhai vs. Sarabhai is returning as a web series. Good news, indeed!

The reality of dreams

Ludmilla Petrushevskaya, one of Russia's foremost literary voices, is also one of the nation's most innovative writers. Straddling genres, and practising in what showcase her versatility both in expression and creative intent, Petrushevskaya's tale-telling penchant has seen her traverse interesting territories in fiction. Fairy tales, a seemingly innocuous site of representative writing bearing the allegorical bent, is where her creative expertise has found outlet in remarkably new ways. Making the unexpected turn on its head, her fairy tales compel us to engage in a rethink of our categories, and the sense we make of them. The Black Coat is a narrative where a girl finds herself in the midst of a dream, awake and moving into consciousness, whose validity is as logical as that of the world she lived in when she did not sleep. Inside the dream, she journeyed on, meeting a truck with passengers who dropped her and took her in as she made a circular move, not towards its end, but into its vortex. As the woman she meets there tells her, the way to 'escape' is to 'wake up'. But waking up is not what one can will oneself to, rather it is dependent on the availability of matches, the burning up of which means that the route to reality is closed forever. The girl, who suddenly found herself wearing a black coat as she woke into the reality of her dream, realised its efficacy: "As long as your match is burning, you can escape. I've just used my last match to help you. Now I don't care what happens. In fact, I'd rather stay. You know, it's all very simple – you don't have to breathe. You can fly wherever you want. You will need neither light nor food. The black coat will protect you from all your problems." Inside the dream, such an option is not just viable, it is something which alone makes sense. This dialogue between these planes of reality is orchestrated to show how other ways of seeing vie and take seat beside our understanding, much of which we refuse to recognise as feasible. As Keith Gessen and Anna Summers mark in their 'Introduction' to Petrushevskaya's anthology There Once Lived a Woman Who Tried to Kill Her Neighbour's Baby, where The Black Coat is included, there are worlds beyond the ones we perceptibly know. "Characters find themselves in a strange place without any memory of the accident that brought them there," write Gessen and Summers, as they point out that "what happens to these characters on their journey in a strange land may be read as a dream, a nightmare caused by shock, or else as a momentous mystical transgression". How one approaches these dream-worlds that co-habit the realities of everyday knowledge is an open-ended question, but more than addressing the playful movement across planes, it is the placing of existential dilemmas that catches our eye. In The New Robinson Crusoe, the satire is scathing to a degree that is disturbingly unavoidable, and it is the layering of 'necessity' and 'purpose' which lays open the significance of existence. Allegorical, but real in the way the alternatives validate other positions, Petrushevskaya's tales carry forward the great Russian storytelling tradition for a modern readership. Her variations of recognisable themes serve as take-offs from the parodic elasticity of fiction that Mikhail Bakhtin talked about as her readings combine the comic with the brutal, thereby inviting us to revisit the 'reality' we hold on to as the only one we have.

The Kanha Tiger Reserve has become India's first tiger reserve to officially introduce a mascot, 'Bhoomisring the Barasingha', recently. The Barasingha or swamp deer is the state animal of Madhya Pradesh. The reserve is the largest national park of Madhya Pradesh. It has a significant population of Bengal tiger, Indian leopards, the sloth bear, barasingha and Indian wild dog. The lush sal/bamboo forests, grassy meadows and ravines of Kanha provided inspiration to Rudyard Kipling for his famous novel Jungle Book.

The temple tree

It stood tall, upright, by the temple gate, Spreading a lush green canopy and loving shade. The flower-sellers and beggars sat huddled beneath, Shielded from the sun, in a cool retreat.

Little starry blooms, peep through clusters of green, Flaunting a beauty, so tranquil, so serene. Blossoms showered at dawn, beneath the tree, Nature's offerings, to adorn the Lord's feet.

Currently prescribed oral contraceptives contain smaller amounts of estrogens and are clearly associated with fewer side effects

Pros and cons of oral contraceptives

Although oral contraceptives have been in use for more than 30 years, and despite innumerable analysis of their effects, experts continue to disagree about their safety and adverse effects. These drugs nearly always contain a synthetic estrogen and variable amounts of a progestin (combined contraceptives), but a few preparations contain only progestins. Currently prescribed oral contraceptives contain smaller amounts of estrogens (<50 micro gram per day) and are clearly associated with fewer side effects than their earlier formulation.

Apart from the family planning benefits of oral contraceptive use, the other beneficial effects are relief of dysmenorrhoea, premenstrual tension, endometriosis, acne, hirsutism; protection against breast disorder, including fibrotic disease and fibroadenoma, ovarian cyst, iron deficiency anaemia and pelvic inflammatory disease.

The minor unwanted effects of oral contraceptive use are nausea, vomiting, headache, migraine, depression, mood disorder, sleep disturbance, diminished libido, leukorrhoea, tenderness of breast, breast fullness, leg cramps, weight gain and hypomenorrhoea or amenorrhoea.

The association between the use of oral contraceptive pills and breast cancer is controversial. Despite the disagreements, the prevailing opinion is that it may increase the risk of breast cancer when combined oral contraceptives are used by women younger than 45 years, particularly nulliparous women younger than 45 years of age. For women older than 45 years, the risk, if any, is negligible.

Oral contraceptives carry an increased risk of cervical cancer, which is associated to the duration of use. More recent studies suggest that the increased risk may be more strongly associated with lifestyle than with the drug. Oral contraceptives probably exert a protective effect against endometrial cancer. They also protect against ovarian cancer – the longer they are used, the greater the protection.

Oral contraceptives used in the past (>50 micro gram estrogen) were clearly associated with an increased risk of venous thrombosis and pulmonary thromboembolism because of increased hepatic synthesis of coagulation factors and reduced levels of antithrombin III. Data with the newer, second-generation formulations (<50 micro gram estrogens) suggest that the overall risk is much less, especially in women younger than 35 years of age who don't smoke and don't have other predisposing influences such as diabetes. More recently, third-generation oral contraceptives, which combine low dose estrogens with synthetic progestins, affect LDL and HDL levels to a lesser extent than natural progestins do and hence the risk of acute myocardial infarction is reduced. However, unexpectedly, the third-generation oral contraceptives confer a higher risk of venous thrombosis than do second-generation oral contraceptives.

Estrogens and progestins have opposing effects on high-density lipoprotein (HDL) and low-density lipoprotein (LDL) levels. Estrogen tends to elevate the level of HDL and reduces the level of LDL. This lipid profile is protective against the development of atherosclerosis. Progestins, on the other hand, tend to lower HDL and elevate LDL, which counters the estrogen effect. The overall effect on the levels of these lipoproteins seems to depend on the preparations used, particularly the dose of progestin in the formulation. There is considerable uncertainty regarding the risk of atherosclerosis and myocardial infarction in users of oral contraceptives. The risk depends on the estrogen content of the formulation, the age of the women and the presence or absence of other risk factors for atherosclerosis.

Recent evidence states that non-smoking, healthy women younger than 45 years who use the newer low-estrogen formulation do not incur an increased risk of ischemic heart disease. Conversely, young women smokers who use the pills are 10 times more likely to suffer myocardial infarction than users who do not smoke.

To conclude, the pros and cons of oral contraceptives use must be viewed in the context of their wide applicability and acceptance as a form of contraception that protects against unwanted pregnancies with their attendant hazards.

All in a minute

During our school days, we were told that even one mark makes a huge difference when it comes to securing top ranks in the examination. Perhaps no one will know the value of 'one mark' better than the student who missed a rank in the examination. Likewise, the person who has lost self-esteem will know the price of 'one mistake' better than anyone else.

'One' is, indeed, powerful. Its value seems immeasurable when it comes to time. As they say, if you want to realise the value of one minute, ask a person who missed the train; if you would like to understand the importance of one second, ask a person who has narrowly escaped an accident; again, if you want to know the value of one millisecond, ask the marathon runner who won the silver medal at the Olympics.

The value of a minute is greatly stressed in the Japanese technique of Kaizen or the 'one-minute principle' for self-improvement. It is a simple method in which one has to practice something for a minute every day. Through the one-minute practice every day, the practitioner is to build a bond with his/her work. By bonding with the work, the person has to overcome the initial fear that niggles in the mind at the beginning of a new venture and, thus, to stop the tendency to make excuses and to put the work off. We just procrastinate; we put things off until the last minute.

However, it is not what we do not have a good intention. Nor is it that we cannot approach our goals with gusto and fervour. Yet there seems to be something that pulls us back from plunging into action. We feel short of confidence, which, in the long run, sets back our plans. We fail mostly because of our inability to map our work. More often than not, we work on a new venture with the same old method; for we just want to attain the milestone quickly without adopting an appropriate technique. This habit of ours makes the mission heavier for us. Result? We lose confidence; we make different excuses to put it off. We procrastinate.

Here the Japanese technique of Kaizen comes in handy. It helps overcome the lack of confidence and let go of the feelings of vulnerability. For here we need not take a big leap in the beginning to attain our goal. What we need to do is to just start with small challenges which require less time and less energy, and which do not give us an impression that we are undertaking a big project. For to achieve our goal, what we need mainly is a continuous effort, which becomes easier when we start doing our chosen activity for a minute every day. By doing it every day we can grow a feeling of attachment to it, love it, and can build a connection between our activity and us. As Michelle McQuaid, a powerful psychology professional, says, "When you're able to connect passion with action, it gives you a sense of purpose and energy that researchers are finding prevents burnout and promotes resilience." When a person loses doing something for a minute, he/she will be able to do it for a longer period of time. Eventually, the person can do it for any length of time needed to complete the activity.

The technique of Kaizen was invented by Masaki Imai. The term is a combination of two root words - 'ka' (change) and 'zen' (good). Thus Kaizen means 'change for the better' where the change agent should maintain regularity and determination. Masaki Imai says, "The message of the Kaizen strategy is that not a day should go by without some kind of improvement being made somewhere." Success does not lie in achieving merely the big things but in moving forward unstoppable. Kaizen or the one-minute practice allows us how to traverse a long way through small steps.

Change does not take place overnight. It requires a certain length of time, a good intention, and most importantly, one small step in the right direction. To put in the words of Emma Stone, "Sometimes the smallest step in the right direction ends up being the biggest step of your life."

Job stress comes in different forms and affects the mind and body in different ways. Major stress comes from having too much or not enough work or doing work that doesn't satisfy us.

It is normal to have some stress. Stress releases hormones that speed up our heart, make breathing faster, and give a burst of energy. Stress can be useful when we need to focus on or finish a big project. But too much stress or being under stress for too long isn't good for us. Constant stress can make us more likely to get sick more often. It can also lead to long-term health problems such as heart diseases, high blood pressure, back problem, and depression.

Most of the time, it is stress that leads to job company longer than anyone else on her team. She waits for her manager to ask if she is interested. But after several weeks, a co-worker is promoted to the new job. Jyoti feels hurt and angry, but she still doesn't say anything.

Tips to avoid work stress

Get organised: Keep track of your projects and deadlines by making a list of what is urgent. Decide what matters most and what can wait.

Don't put things off: Use a planner to plan out your day or week. Just seeing on paper that there is time to get each task done can help us get to work. Break a large project into small steps, and set a deadline for each one.

Work stress

burnout and health problems. Job stress can affect home life too. Here are some common sources of major job stress

Lack of control: Feeling as if we have no control over our work or duties is the biggest cause of job stress. People who feel like they have no control at work are most likely to get stress-related illnesses.

Increased responsibility: Taking on extra duty is stressful. We can get more stressed if we have too much work to do and can't say 'no' to new tasks.

Job satisfaction and performance: Do we take pride in our job? If our job isn't meaningful, we may find it stressful. Are we worried about doing well at work? Feeling insecure about job performance is a major source of stress for many people.

Poor communication: Tension on the job often comes from poor communication. Being unable to talk about our needs, concerns, and frustrations can create stress. A new job with more responsibilities and better pay just opened up, in say, Jyoti's department. Jyoti knows she can do this job. And she has been with the

Learn to say 'no': You don't need to over commit yourself. If you take on too much, you are creating stress.

Focus: Do one thing at a time. In some cases, you can do two things at a time. But if you start feeling stressed, go back to doing one thing at a time.

Concentrate: Try to limit distractions and interruptions. Ask others to give you a block of time when you are not disturbed.

Delegate: Ask someone else to take on a task. It is not always important to have all the control. Identify what is creating stress at work. Maybe it is the lack of control over your job. Or maybe it is a concern about losing your job or how you are doing at work. You might feel stressed because you are unable to express your thoughts and ideas to your boss and coworkers.

Set a goal for yourself that involves reducing your stress level. Also think about a long-term goal.

The symphonic house

On a far Northern Lake Michigan beach, along with the wind and waves, resides a family with a joint experiment between David Hanawalt, architect and Bill Close, sonic installation artiste. The Wege House explores in first steps the integration of site, sight and sound. As a main theme in their newly-designed and built house, they have commissioned the creation of architecture as musical instruments. Hanawalt and Close collaborate to bring forth a home that is truly in resonance. The house is set up with a series of musical experiences that are intriguing and inviting for the Wege family and guests. Curious fingers of any musical background find the excitement of bringing the architecture to life through sound/music.

As one enters the house, they are invited into a covered space in which the entire 12x12 foot wall is a tight pattern of vertical strings. As a finger runs along the wall of strings, they come to life with chordal resonance that shuns away quickly as the tight space compresses the sound.

At the core of the house run massive beams, 40 feet in length. These beams become the basis for the core instruments of the house. These are two long stringed instruments. The strings run from musical bridges that are accessible on the second floor. The strings run out through specially designed gaps in a low wall and out over the main room in the house. When the instrument is played, the main room is alive with the pure tones of long stringed vibration. This vibration is transferred into the beams and walls of the main room. This literally puts both the listener and the player inside the resonant chamber of the instrument. It is the ultimate in surround sound as the architecture is the instrument.

The instruments are tuned primarily through length. The longer the string, the lower the sound. To create the tone of middle C on the piano, a 40-foot long string is needed. Different lengths can be defined by using the architecture and tuning bridges that mount anywhere along the string. Tension does not play a major role in the tuning process, all the strings have approximately 75 pounds of pressure on them. They are not under a lot of pressure, thus, keeping the installation safe and non-disruptive to the architecture. Two experimental wind harps are designed into the exterior of the house. Running 15-foot high, they are positioned to catch wind and set up a series of tones that ideally would transfer into the main room.

Ever wondered why smartphone cameras need a bump? The camera necessitates a bump on the back of the phone because the focal length of the lenses and camera assembly cannot be made any thinner. Some, among us, however, don't find this appealing; more so because the bump makes it unstable on a flat surface. But since we live in a world constantly developing technologically, we were bound to see that bump go. And yes, it will go out of fashion soon as engineers at Germany's Fraunhofer Institute have already developed a smartphone camera module - mind the word 'module' - that is thin enough to be squeezed inside a smartphone, removing the need for a camera bump without compromising on quality.

The concept from Fraunhofer Institute uses four image sensors rotated 90 degrees so that they point out of the side of the phone. A set of tiny mirrors in front of the sensors reflects the image from the front or rear of the phone. The mirrors simply flip around so images can be taken to the front and rear of the phone.

The concept model, having a height of only 3.5 mm (half the height of a comparable commercial unit), can snap pictures at an amazing 20MP resolution.

Well, do you have any other issue to be taken up by those guys in Germany?

An eye for details

Europe seems to be again taking a lead from the Asian giants as far as smartphones are concerned. With Samsung struggling to get back on their feet, the Finnish giant Nokia is making the right noise. It recently leaked information that the yet-to-be launched Nokia 9 has Android 7.1.2, 6GB RAM, 3800mAh Battery, OZO Audio Tech and an iris scanner. Well, I don't think you need any more technologies in your smartphone.

As per the leak, Nokia 9 will sport a 5.5-inch QHD (1440x2560 pixels) OLED display, powered by a Qualcomm Snapdragon 835 SoC and bear a 22 MP dual-lens rear camera setup with Carl Zeiss optics, and a 12 MP front-facing camera. There's more to it! The 9 will reportedly be available in 64GB and 128GB storage variants, to be powered by a 3800mAh battery with Quick Charge 4.0 fast charging technology.

This column, as you may remember, had earlier mentioned about this iris scanner in the recently launched Samsung Galaxy S8.

A new wait has begun.

"Is there a difference between a 'drama' and a 'play'?"

"Both of them are synonyms but sometimes used a little differently. Drama is plays considered as a form of literature, as classical drama, modern drama etc; whereas a play is a piece of writing meant to be performed by actors in a theatre or on television or radio."

"But don't we use them as same?"

"Yes, we do. A drama is also a play for the theatre, etc. But when you go to a theatre you generally go to watch a play, not a drama!"

"Oh, yes..."

"However, a playwright and a dramatist are the same person, who writes plays for the stage, television or radio."

"You know, Assam lost a great playwright recently... And he was my maternal uncle."

"Yes, I know. He was a well-known literary figure who gave Assamese drama a new direction with his unconventional plays. He was a Padma awardee and Sahitya Akademi and Sangeet Natak Akademi award winner too. A great loss indeed."

"Right... Well, tell me, is 'award' same as 'reward' and 'prize'?"

"You mean the 'with' is unnecessary?"

"Yes, simply 'awarded a certificate would have been fine.'

"Well, anyway, will you accompany me to the theatre? There is an award-winning drama, I mean play, going to be staged there this evening!"

"Good question. These are confusing terms. An award is normally a prize given to somebody in recognition of their achievement: The Dalai Lama was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. A reward is also a prize or token of appreciation given to somebody, but in recognition of his or her service or effort: She was rewarded a cash prize for her effort."

"Okay... and 'prize'?"

"'Prize' cannot be used as a verb with the same meaning as 'award' or 'reward'."

"I see. You know, my son was awarded with a certificate by the school authority as he stood first in his class."

"Well, that's good. But somebody was awarded something, not with something..."

"You mean the 'with' is unnecessary?"

"Yes, simply 'awarded a certificate would have been fine.'

This famous quote from Shakespeare's As You Like It has been culled by Abinash Das, received via e-mail: 'All the world's a stage, And all the men and women merely players; They have their exits and their entrances; And one man in his time plays many parts...'.

Never on time

Some people just can't seem to show up on time – and scientists say they may have worked out why. They say it could be a result of people always deciding to do 'one more thing' before leaving. Thankfully, they also revealed three simple tricks that could help sufferers.

Chronic lateness occurs due to a problem with a person's Time-Based Prospective Memory (TBM) – a type of memory where remembering something is triggered by a time-related cue, for example needing to get to work by 9 am.

The researchers, based at Washington University, found that some people are better time estimators than others, but there are ways to break a pattern of lateness. They found that some people are better at estimating time than others, and the main factor in people being too early or too late was their time estimation bias.

According to the research, there are three things that can help reduce one's own time estimation bias. Firstly, it is as simple as checking the clock regularly. Secondly, construct a strategy to get things done. And thirdly, resist the temptation to do 'one more thing' before you leave, and estimate ahead of time how long each part of doing something will take.

Male vanity is no longer a gay thing. No lad's wardrobe is complete without a few Armani, Dolce & Gabbana and Calvin Klein shirts (preferably with the name in really big letters) so everyone knows where the money went and now the world's top fashion designers want to get their hands on male innerwear. Times have changed. Innerwear has become a fashion statement, and men no longer rely on their wives, mothers and girlfriends to buy it for them. In 1992, 71 million pairs of pants were sold in the UK. Last year, this rose to 82 million.

Calvin Klein has cleaned up in this department. As always, he succeeded by keeping it simple, first, he

The problem is that it is hard for other designers to come up with variations on this classic theme; so instead they have had to go for new fabrics such as chiffon, and Italian design house Gucci, which sells filmies at prices that would buy you a whole drawer full of crisp, cotton numbers.

According to Closer magazine, Khloe chose an expensive hamper of treats from top London store Harrods as a way of congratulations. Khloe was also among the first to pen her well wishes to Cheryl when she announced the birth of her son via Instagram on March 25.

A script for Jennifer

WITH his current series, The Leftovers, coming to a close, Justin Theroux says he is looking forward to stepping behind the camera for a while to focus on his writing. The 45-year-old actor confessed that would be more than willing to pen a script for his wife Jennifer Aniston, 48, in an interview with ET.

"We toss around ideas occasionally, but it has got to be something I want to write and something she wants to act in, which is harder than you might think. But yeah, it would be fantastic if we were able to do something together," said Theroux, who has been married to Aniston since August 2015.

Serene Shnongpdeng

Meghalaya is bestowed with many marvels of nature – from deep gorges to high falls, from long caves to beautiful lakes and rivers. Earlier this year, my wife and I had the opportunity to explore a beautiful location – Shnongpdeng – a place where one can view the bed of a river 20-30 feet below. After having arranged a homestay – thanks to my friend, Ratul – we set off to explore Shnongpdeng.

Shnongpdeng is around 100 kms from Shillong, and eight kms from Dawki. The Shillong-Dawki road offers great spectacles of deep gorges, valleys and vast stretches of open fields, dotted with small eateries. We could not help but halt at many places to click pictures. The condition of the road concerned us, but we were ready to bear the trouble as long as we go to see Shnongpdeng.

We reached Dawki late in the afternoon. The road was narrow and the suspension bridge over Dawki river allowed only one vehicle to pass at a time. As a result we had to wait for some time near the river while the traffic was being cleared. On seeing the clear waters, we could not resist going for a boat ride. We took two boats, costing Rs 500 each. To reach the river, we had to climb down quite a bit, but the transparency of the water and its colour was worth the tedious trek. It was a half an hour boat ride of sheer enjoyment. We could see fish, pebbles and rocks through the clear waters.

The road to Shnongpdeng is also very narrow, with big buses plying. By the time we reached Shnongpdeng, it was already dark. Black, our host, was waiting for us. Even though it was dark, we could feel the festivity in the air as the place was buzzing with young people. We metalam, who guided us to our homestay which was down by the river. Iam also set up a campfire for us.

Sitting by the fire, we ate, drank and danced to the tune of some Hindi numbers. The pleasant wind and the sound of the flowing river in this wilderness made us forget all our worries.

We reached the river early in the morning. On the beach, there were young boys and girls doing yoga, sipping their morning tea, while some bathed in the river. After a refreshing bath in the river, we went to other parts of the river which had more wonders to offer. There is a suspension bridge over the river which offers you a spectacle of the river. The water is so transparent that boats seem to be floating in the air.

It was 10 am and the boat ride had opened for tourists. We rushed to the booking counter and hired two boats. The rate is the same as that in Dawki – Rs 500 for one boat. The water of the Umngot river in Shnongpdeng is far more cleaner than that in Dawki.

There are many sports activities too that visitors can try such as zip-lining, fishing, swimming, kayaking, rappelling, rock climbing, cliff jumping, etc.

We had lunch prepared by Iam and his team, and left the place with wonderful memories.

Iam informed us that the best time to visit Shnongpdeng is December, January and early February. I am confident you too will enjoy a visit to Shnongpdeng as much as we did.

Naam Shabana
DIRECTOR: SHIVAM NAIR
STARRING: TAAPSEE PANNU, AKSHAY KUMAR, MANU BAIRYEE, PRITHVIRAJ SUKUMARAN
SUKUMARAN

I n casting an actress in the lead role in an out-and-out actioner, this movie is in Alira (released last year) territory. If a plump heroine took on the baddies in that flick, a lissome one lets her fists and licks do all the talking in Naam Shabana – and how! actually, this is a spin-off script – a prequel – building on the character of a female secret agent named Shabana, earlier seen in the spy thriller Baby (2015) directed by Neeraj Pandey, who has also produced the current film. Despite the somewhat implausible plot, the razor-sharp action set pieces will keep the viewers hooked.

For reasons not easily understandable, an unnamed agency tasked with keeping the national security intact at any cost literally zooms in on college student Shabana Khan (Taapsee Pannu) as a future recruit, from the time she is sent to a juvenile remand home after a family tragedy, till she finds herself helplessly witnessing the killing of her boyfriend in a street brawl. Now Shabana is a Kudo (note: it is kudo, not judo) champion who does not brook any offence from tease avatars, Ranvir Singh, the official who calls the shots in the agency, strikes a deal with Shabana: he will help locate her boyfriend's killers but she will have to agree to work for the agency as a field agent after exacting her revenge. When Shabana wishes to know why she is the chosen one, Singh replies: "women are born spies" (now whatever that means).

The agency is tailing a dreaded arms dealer, Mikhail, known for changing his appearance. The only means of tracing him is through a middleman called Tony (Prithviraj Sukumaran) who is active in Kuala Lumpur. So Singh sends Shabana – after a rigorous training regimen – to corner Tony who has been constantly escaping capture. To help her (or more precisely, to pull her out of real danger in the last minute), there is a no-nonsense senior officer, Ajay Singh (Akshay Kumar).

Taapsee Pannu stands out in the eponymous role not so much for any heavy-duty acting but for the display of excellent fighting skills. All that Manoj Bajpayee does in the film is give instructions to his subordinates over the cell phone. It is always good to see Akshay Kumar, the original action man of Bollywood, return to bashing enemies like only he can. Malayalam actor Prithviraj Sukumaran looks suave as the robust villain.

Rochak Kohli and Meet Bros have composed the music which has been mostly used in dance numbers.

An ode to Bharalu

Lord Brahma indeed must be very pleased at the recent turn of events," my friend Ajit remarked.

"What makes you think so?" I asked.
"Well, for centuries Lord Brahma's son – river Brahmaputra was neglected and was never given the respect it so rightfully deserved, barring one single day in the calendar – Ashokastami. But now thanks to Namami, Pandit from far away Hardwar are leading the way in paying obeisance to the great river."

"But what has Lord Brahma to do with it?"

"Come on, Lord Brahma must be happy that at last gender equality has prevailed. As till now only the female rivers like Ganga, Jamuna were venerated. But now Brahmaputra has joined the league."

"Ajit, while you are focussing on Namami Brahmaputra, I am thinking on organising 'Pranami Bharalu', that too during the peak monsoons."

"That's preposterous!"

"No way, Ajit! Keeping in sync with the times I have also written the lyrics for the theme song of Pranami Bharalu which is:

Oh, our very own Bharalu,
Thanks for giving us the clue,
On making money glow,
By hindering your flow.

"But what is Pranami Bharalu all about?"

"I have realised that a new river valley civilisation is flourishing in the city."

"New river valley civilisation in the city!"

"Yes, it is the Bharalu valley civilisation. And I don't care what others say, I am going to try my best to create awareness to protect this modern river valley civilisation, even if it is responsible for flash floods and water logging in the city. We just can't let the Bharalu valley civilisation slip into oblivion like the Indus valley civilisation."

"I plan to showcase before the world through Pranami Bharalu that it is perhaps the only river in the world which can never be tamed. While our neighbours have managed to tame the Huang He, which was once termed as China's sorrow, successive governments, bureaucrats, water resource experts and their grandiose plans have failed miserably to control Bharalu in spate. In fact, through Pranami, I plan to drive home the point that Bharalu has literally drained away funds which were earmarked to control it over the decades. Isn't it amazing?"

"I think you have a point."

"Pranami Bharalu will help in promoting flood tourism in the Anil Nagar and Nabin Nagar areas. We can market this option to woo foreign tourists to visit the area to get a first-hand experience on how for decades people have perfected the art of surviving with floods like the way some bravehearts do it in the popular TV show Man vs. Wild."

"Interesting!"

"With almost every sphere of human activity having a political connect, Pranami Bharalu will give the political leaders the opportunity to share the woes of the common people in those areas which are otherwise impossible. Standing in ankle deep water, in full presence of the media, they will be in a position to assure the people residing near Bharalu that a solution to end their watery woes is not far off."

"I see."

"Not only for the politicians, Pranami Bharalu will have boat-ride packages for tourists both from the country and abroad. The boat rides will go a long way in highlighting the unique appeal of the river."

"Unique appeal!"

"Yes, because a boat ride will make the tourists aware of the fact that it is perhaps the only river in the world devoid of any aquatic life, the way development and deluge can go together and the techniques to convert a once bubbling river into a drain."

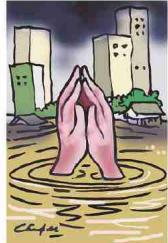

"That's true. But will your Pranami Bharalu take off?"

"Don't you worry as no one appreciates bands and festivals like we do!"
