No-detention policy in school to be revoked

STAFF REPORTER

GUWAHATI, May 6: Noting the poor quality of education and dropouts in Class IX, the Central government is likely to make this month the no-detention policy and allow States to detain a student after giving him or her a fair chance in Class V and VIII.

Separate railway zone for NE likely

STAFF REPORTER

GUWAHATI, May 6: The Railway Ministry may discuss and look into the issue of bifurcation of the Northeast Frontier Railway (NFR) zone and creating a separate zone which will have jurisdiction solely over the seven northeastern states while the existing areas of NFR located in West Bengal and Bihar could be turned into a different zonal railway.

Speaking at a press conference after participating in the commencement of the railway electrification work between Raninagar Jalgauja and Guwahati at Morigaon this evening, Railway Minister Suresh Prabhu said that bifurcation or reorganisation of the NFR is part of a broader issue of development of the Northeast.

To a question put by The Assam Tribune the Railway Minister would consider bifurcating the NFR and separating the areas of the Northeast from those of Bihar and West Bengal, the minister said. "We will discuss this. We will discuss whatever inputs we receive."

People and organisations of the Northeast have frequently alleged that most of the benefits, projects as well as railway vacancies are cornered by the NFR divisions falling in Bihar and West Bengal, while the seven

Implement Assam Accord in toto: Cong

SPL. CORRESPONDENT

NEW DELHI, May 6: Notwithstanding its silence on the latest controversy on the contentious issue, the Assam Congress today demanded implementation of the Assam Accord in letter and spirit and urged the Narendra Modi government to defend Section 6A of the Citizenship Act in the Supreme Court.

Days after the AIUDF took the Congress to task for the mess over the issue pending before a Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court, the Congress party in Assam lashed its top leaders, including MPs, MLAs and office-bearers, before the President of India Pranab Mukherjee, Union Home Minister Rajnath Singh and Congress vice president Rahul Gandhi.

Led by State president Rupun Bora, the Congress delegation urged Rajnath Singh to take all steps for defending Section 6A of the Citizenship Act before the Supreme Court, as the Section was inserted as per the Assam Accord.

The Union Home Minister conveyed that he was aware of the developments and gave a patient hearing to the Congress delegation.

"We urge you to take all necessary steps for defending (See page 12)

MUMBAI, May 6: After the Centre proposed a no-fly list for unruly flies, Shiv Sena MP Ravindra Gaikwad, who was banned by domestic airlines following a run-in with Air India staff, today said strict guidelines should be laid down for airline crew as well on how to treat and address the requirements of passengers," Gaikwad told PTI.

"As a Member of Parliament, I am aware of the number of complaints raised against Air India's crew, and the litigations where the staff have been accused of ignoring passengers being unruly. Hardly any action is initiated against its crew. If rules have to be formed, there should be equally stringent rules for the crew members as well," Gaikwad said.

On March 23, Gaikwad claimed to have hit a senior staffer of the AI with a slipper "23 times" for not being allowed to fly business class in an all-economy plane. — PTI

Rajgarh road expansion project on

MAMATA MISHRA

GUWAHATI: May 6: Facing negligence of the authorities and rampant encroachment for years, the Rajgarh Road of Guwahati would soon get a new lease of life. If things go as planned, the major problems including lack of proper drainage and chaotic traffic congestion, would be addressed through an expansion project taken up for the road in two phases.

The Rajgarh Road connects two arterial roads of Guwahati - the MRD Road at Chandmari and the GS Road at Bhengagarh. Besides, the RG Baruah Road that runs parallel to the Rajgarh Road is also connected through several by-lanes and link roads.

After the expansion project was halted for the ongoing pipeline laying work of the PWD's City Division III, faced some roadblocks when a newly constructed stretch of 100 metres was dug up for the pipeline laying work. However, as the pipeline laying might require a couple of months more, the authorities have decided to continue the construction of two lanes of the four-lane project. In the first phase, of the 2,066-metre long road, a stretch of 1,130 metres from the Chandmari railway crossing to the petrol pump would be widened and reconstructed.

The project worth Rs 8.18 crore, being executed by the PWD's City Division III, faced some roadblocks when a newly constructed stretch of 100 metres was dug up for the pipeline laying work. However, as the pipeline laying might require a couple of months more, the authorities have decided to continue the construction of two lanes of the four-lane project. The expansion project has occupied all the government land on both sides of the Rajgarh road. At places, some stretches are wider than the prescribed road width, which garh Road would have a left drain and footpath on the left side of the road, whereas on the right side, a solid footpath and service drain would provide effective water exit channel. Besides, the road would also have proper divider," the sources added.

At present, the construction work of drainage and footpath boundary wall is under way. The citizens, however, complained about the slow pace of construction along with the inconvenience caused due to the construction materials dumped on the road.

"Over the years, the Rajgarh area has witness rapid commercialisation with a number of shops and commercial outlets coming up. Moreover, rampant encroachment and roadside parking have further narrowed down the road. Though the expansion of road is the need of the hour, the work must be accelerated. Clubbed with the pipeline work, the construction work is aggravating the traffic congestion in the area," said Pulak Kalita, a local of the area.

MESSAGE FOR TODAY

Women do not get raped because they weren't careful enough. Women get raped because someone raped them.

- JESSICA VALENTI

The Assam Tribune

Unambiguous message

In 2012 a horrific tragedy was enacted on a road in Delhi, that left ordinary human beings bereft of words and reduced expression of sorrow to clichés. A 23 year old paramedical student was subjected to mind shattering brutality by a gang of hoodlums when she along with her companion had mistakenly boarded an empty bus. Across India millions had come out to the street crying for justice, millions had prayed for her. The heroic manner in which the badly injured "Nirbhaya" battled to survive had been one ray of hope, but too was cruelly snuffed out at a hospital in Singapore, rendering a bewildered civil society desolate yet angry. The mills of justice might move slowly, but they grind exceedingly well. Six men were arrested for a crime which the Supreme Court of India termed as "most brutal, barbaric and diabolical" – one committed suicide in jail, another served time in a remand home before being let off because he was a juvenile, while the remaining four were found guilty and sentenced to death. Justice must not only be served, it must also be seen to be served! In the course of the last four years this "rarest of rare" case has moved up the judicial structure and now India's Apex Court has finally confirmed the death sentences.

By doing so the Court has sent out an unambiguous message to all evil-doers, in particular those who commit violent crimes against women, that sooner or later justice would catch up with them. There are numerous other rape and violence victims in India crying out for justice. This judgement will empower the entire judicial system to mete due punishment to criminals who have perpetrated similar diabolical acts. The Nirbhaya case had touched a raw nerve in the conscience of the nation, causing deep introspection which has resulted in amendment to archaic laws as also helped in sensitizing the forces of law and order to adopt a more humane attitude to women victims. By sending out this unambiguous message and empowering the judicial system the Apex Court has indeed struck another blow for the safety and security of women in India.

Uncalled-for move

For a State like Assam besieged with a plethora of pressing problems, the Government should have better preoccupations than prescribing dress code for its employees. The Government's move to ensure that its employees attend office 'traditional dresses' on first and third Saturdays of every month exposes the working clueless minds. Even though the Government – now on the back foot following public criticism – is defending itself by saying that the 'dress code' was voluntary, the very premise of the Government's thinking is flawed. No Government should have any business as to what its employees should wear, and a formal communication – even if it is a recommendation in nature – is uncalled for. As the State is reeling under debilitating concerns ranging from the abysmal status of its infrastructure to recurring disasters like floods to burgeoning unemployment, the Government needs to put its sincere and sustained focus on addressing these concerns and fast-track the State's development process. This cannot happen as long as the Government chooses to keep itself engaged with needless and superfluous pursuits. Disturbingly, BJP Governments in States as also at the Centre seems to be unduly preoccupied with matters that fall strictly in an individual's personal domain and therefore best left to individual discretion. This is even truer in a country of mind-boggling diversity like India where different cultures and traditions flourished in peaceful coexistence over the centuries. Indeed, any unwarranted intrusion in matters of personal choice such as dress, food habit, cultures, etc., in the name of upholding nationalism is likely to foment mutual distrust among communities, eroding the nation's resilient secular edifice. Another exercise of the State Government in remanning a number of roads in State capital Guwahati has also raised a few eyebrows. While naming of roads after illustrious sons of the soil is a universal practice that amounts to paying respect, renaming a road like the GS Road or the AT Road or a place like Guwahati Club may not be desirable. These names have become a part of our collective psyche as well as heritage dating back to the British days, and they deserve retention just like we are preserving a few British-era buildings as heritage structures. Also questionable is the naming of two roads in the names of Pandit Deendayal Upadhyaya and Shyama Prasad Mukherjee – two RSS ideologues who were never national icons, and can in no way be linked with Assam's socio-cultural life. Going by the State Government's own contention, the renaming should have been after persons who made stellar contributions to the State's socio-cultural and literary spheres.

How many medical colleges are truly working in Assam with all facilities? As we know, Guwahati, Dibrugarh, Barpeta, Silchar, Jorhat, Tezpur... are on or the offing. That makes it six, and we really do not know how many are in the planning stage, with the energetic health minister we have now. There was a time, when Dibrugarh was at the epicentre of medical fraternity or medical expertise of the state. Then came GMCH (Gauhati Medical College and Hospital), and the centre point moved to Guwahati on the matter of medical science and treatment for the whole of medical science at the time.

However, the reverse is also true. On any train or flight going upcountry, you will find hundreds of patients along with their caretakers, proceeding to Mumbai, Vellore, Delhi for better medical treatment or second opinion.

The number of patients from Assam, journeying towards the leading medical colleges and hospitals of India, both state and private, is on the increase (I am not including Tata Cancer Hospital). Why is there this contradicting situation? Is it that we have less specialised infrastructural facilities or less number of experts in special fields?

Sending some children to Dr Shetty's hospital in Bengaluru for early heart treatment is a good step but definitely is not the final answer to the growing problem of infirmities and illness among the young and old. The state government of Assam, under the present health minister must have a thorough scientific analytical study. Health service in Assam has still to go a long way to match the country's standard in the existing medical colleges and hospitals already there in Assam, not to speak of international standard. Constant euphoria during inauguration of new medical colleges on almost monthly basis does not seem to meet the gigantic needs as some still lack the standard of health service being provided both in the urban and in the rural area.

There is a distinct difference between the aim of a medical college as such and the hospital service attached to it. A medical college is not a training institute and not a teaching one though ultimately it grows concurrently and also, inevitably. The teaching staff of a medical college cannot remain absolutely busy for treating the patients, also there are basic subjects like anatomy, physiology, biochemistry and pathology where deep study and research is equally important. The AIIMS in Delhi do not take up each and every case; it has the philosophy of deep research on any medical subject of the day. There are other serious problems of having medical colleges depending on political needs rather than on need based analysis of the area it serves.

Many a time the experts and specialists on various subjects enrolled in a medical college prefer to stay in a place, where they can have good practice, with money. For example, is anyone really trying to find out how many specialists are working within the campus of Barpeta although there is a medical college there or how many will be staying in Lakhimpur? Officially yes, they are on the rolls but mostly they are actually going to be staying in big cities like Guwahati. I do not blame them either, because a worthy specialist does not only require money but also, constant practice on the subject.

On the contrary, do we have hospitals with modern facilities and experts in major places like the district headquarters of Assam?

At the moment, it is not a rosy situation for the district hospitals and the hospitals in the interior areas. Let there be a deep study. How many health centres in the village areas have the basic minimum quantities of life saving medicines and equipment? We may not require specialists or experts in all branches in the interior hospitals, but what is expected is that for each and every case one does not need to have to rush to a big hospital only. Immediate help and timely care in a life-saving situation or medical emergency with the basic medicines/ drugs with sanitised hygienic surroundings, is the right of every citizen.

Inadequate number of beds, inadequate number of pharmacists and nursing staff and above all, inadequate number of doctors, have put Assam in a poor state of health service in comparison to any place like Delhi, Mumbai or Bengaluru. Our constant demand to have more number of medical colleges is not the real answer. Infact, I would go to the extent, why should we have a fight now whether we should have an AIIMS at Changlang or at Raha? We have one IIT in Guwahati and we are proud of it. Likewise, let there be one AIIMS in Assam with the same standard as it has been maintained in Delhi. It does not matter whether it is in Upper or Lower Assam or in any hilly area. The third factor, which is most important is the testing and laboratory facility to be available in all the neighbouring areas with trained staff in support.

I have one more suggestion: if a specialist doctor wants to have practice without ignoring his basic duty in the hospital, without the aim of earning money, or without ignoring primary duty, they should be encouraged to do so. There is a distinct difference between a doctor specialist and an engineer on the job. I compliment our Health Minister for all the good effort he has made to increase number of medical colleges in the state but at the same time, I appeal, do not lower the standard for the sake of numbers. Health is a very serious subject.

In our country health insurance is not common for all. Only two sections of people get it; (a) those who can afford, (b) who are below poverty line. Till this country can evolve a system like all western countries where every citizen will have health insurance, it is the sacred duty of the government that we maintain our government hospitals in the best possible way. Apart from medical colleges as I have already indicated, every health centre must have proper hygienic approach. It should be like a military hospital a symbol of neatness, cleanliness and system oriented in all facilities?

fire crackers 'noise' are some of the serious nuisance we have discussed and in this respect the Apex Court of India had given various guidelines and instructions but the Government or rather successive parties in power did not care to give due attention to those directions for reasons best known to them only. In the year 2005, the Supreme Court of India in Noise Pollution Case(V) had held that Right to Freedom from noise pol-the said directions of the Apex court and perform their duties in accordance with the prescribed rules and orders in a holistic manner.

In various countries of the world, laws have been enacted and rules laid down to curb the menace of 'noise' and they have been seriously implementing those laws keeping in view the health hazards of the people of their respective states.

In order to curb the growing nuisance of noise pollution, the Government of India has enacted Air (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, in 1981, Environment Protection Act, 1986 and Noise Pollution (Regulation and Control Rules, 2000, All Acts, Rules, orders and notifications pertaining to Pollution Control have to be read and excuted taking into consideration the fundamental rights given by the constitution of India under Chapter-III. Very recently, a senior Judge of the Supreme Court of India Justice Ranjan Gogoi for himself and for Justice NV Ramana has stated "Freedom of religion under Article 25 and 26 of the constitution is not only confined to beliefs but extends to religious practices also. Right to belief and practice is guaranteed under Article 25 subject to public order, morality and health and other provisions of Part-III of the constitution....rights guaranteed under Article 25 and 26 are, therefore circumscribed and are to be enjoyed within constitutionally permissible parameters." Those rights are not absolute.

Right to live peacefully gracefully and comfortably in his own way, without disturbing others, is a fundamental right under Article 21 of our constitution. No religion or its scriptures command its followers to do their prayers through amplifiers or loud speakers, which is, in fact, a more recent trend started quite late after the invention of such equipments, while religion has existed much before such inventions and it has survived and continues to do so independent of such modern rituals and chivalries. Where religious prayers/charts, songs/music and speech are aired amplifying the same through loud speakers specially, at odd hours of the night, same could be termed as public nuisance and that is 'noise'.

In our civilized society, most of the religious groups have some kind of tendency to ignore dictums of law and other executive directions forcing, thereby, others to listen to them at the cost of their health, comfort and study.

The issue of noise pollution has not been taken seriously in our country. Enough laws and rules are there in the field and the law enforcing agencies have been amply empowered to control noise pollution effectively. But the Apex Court has rightly pointed out that powers are there but there is a lack of will on part of the executive to implement the law and directions of the highest court of the land. Our civil society is also equally responsible for noise menace.

Noise, nuisance and Nigam

■ Aswini Thakur

A proposal to the controversy culminating obviously in a religious debate in most of the electronic media of national level which took an ugly turn resulting in embarrassment to our basically tolerant society. Having regard to the gravity of the issue aired and perceptible magnitude of the impact of open discussion on our secular society, it may not be incorrect to point out that such flimsy issues should not be amplified in the way that was done by two of the important national TV channels. Sensible issues, like the one on singer Sonu Nigam's personal feeling, requires careful analysis before it is projected as a national issue as the subject is highly inflammable.

The word 'noise' is said to be derived from the Latin word "nuisus" and has been defined in addition to other dictionary meaning as "unwanted sound, a potential hazard to health and communication dumped in to the environment with regard to adverse effect it may have on unwillingness" (per Environmental Law). In the year 1996 a Central Pollution Board news letter defined 'noise' as a sound which pleases the listener or of some kind of music and that which cause pain and annoyance 'caused'. Noise, is no doubt, more than nuisance for day to day human life. Nobody can claim fundamental right to create noise, for any reason or excuse, whatsoever by amplifying the sound of one's activities like speeches, singing, praying, lution is a fundamental right protected by Article 21 of the Constitution of India and noise pollution beyond permissible limits is an infringement into that right and accordingly, the Apex court gave strict / specific directions in respect of emission of sound and laid down certain guidelines regarding permissible levels of sound emission as well as time limit within which such sound emitting amplifiers/speakers or instruments could be used. At the same time, the court has empowered the State to make provisions for seizure and confiscation of such speakers, amplifiers or other equipment in the event of violation of the directions of the court and the administration is duty bound to execute

Bodos pushed into endless struggle for survival: Islary

CORRESPONDENT

TEZPUR, May 6: "It is unfortunate that despite having an unmatched rich culture, tradition and language, the Bodo have been pushed into an endless struggle for their survival," observed ABSU secretary Lawrence Islary while addressing a mammoth gathering at the 7th Rangali Bwisisag programme celebrating of West Tezpur Anchalik ABSU that came to an end recently at the Natun Ghatwa village under Phulaguri Gaon Panchayat in Sonitpur district.

Islary in his long discourse as chief guest mentioned that at the very beginning of the Boro movement, the ABSU submitted a 91-point memorandum to the Government wherein certain issues like provincialisation of schools, appointment of teachers in Bodo medium schools, freeing the tribal belt and blocks from illegal occupation of alleged infiltrators etc., were highlighted and a separate Bodoland was not a prime factor.

But in later years, when not a single issue was seen to have received the priority of the Government, the Bodos were compelled to go for a series of movements for the creation of a separated State simultaneously along with other issues. Expressing his grave concern over the lackadaisical attitude towards the issues of the Boro nation he also stated that for leading a nation, the educational development is a must. Accordingly for fulfilling the same target, ABSU besides other issues has been in a long march struggling for the last fifty years."

"We are fighting under the jurisdiction of the Indian Constitution. We are of the opinion that if Teleganga was created under the Indian Constitution why not Bodoland under the same mechanism," he added and added that the new marriage policy of the Central Government is nothing but a very drastic policy of destroying the identity of the people belonging to the ST and SC communities. "It is nothing but an insult to us," he said. Urging the Bodos to stand united for the Bodoland movement, he also stated that for leading a nation, the educational development is a must. Accordingly for fulfilling the same target, ABSU besides other issues has been in a long march over the theme of Mission Quality Education".

Along with other dignitaries, the event presided over by the assistant teacher of Khelmati ME School was graced by ABSU adviser, Maneswar Daimary and Ganesh Basumatary, sports secretary, ABSU. In the programme, besides Bagruniba and Kheria dance competition Bihu and Jhumur dance were also presented to showcase the ethnic fabric of the greater area. The day's function began with the unfurling of ABSU flag by the president of the West Tezpur Anchalik ABSU, Jiju Boro. Earlier on the first day of the two-day long event, literary and sports competitions were held among the students the winners of which were awarded in the programme.

schools are expected to be developed", the Inspector added.

The newly-joined principals are very much energetic and enthusiastic for all round development of the schools along with the academic environment. Talking to this correspondent, the newly-joined principal of Dergaon HS School, Anup Barthakur stated that his top priority is betterment of the academic environment of the school and to get cent per cent results. He also wants to create awareness in future generation among the students. "To get feedback about the teachers, I will sit with the students on the bench. The senior teachers will give guidance to the junior ones on academic matters. As a part of social responsibility, I will come to the nearby villages with the schools," he added. It is pertinent to mention here that the school established way back in 1908, was upgraded to HS school in 1977. The last permanent principal of the school was Jibkanta Baruah who retired in October, 1993.

"As the schools were running with 'in-charge principals' for the last several years, they could not work for the betterment of their schools. GST will boost revenue collection: CM

STAFF REPORTER

GUWAHATI, May 6: "The Goods and Services Tax (GST) will bring revolutionary changes to our taxation system and plug all loopholes in the system to check corruption. It will also bolster the revenue collection of the State while simultaneously reducing the burden on the consumers," Sonowal said.

Assoam and other north-eastern States would be able to derive benefit out of GST as it has kept special provisions for the 'Himalayan region' States' pertaining with the special State status that these States enjoyed, Sonowal added.

Referring to 21.6 per cent growth in revenue collection of the State government during the current year, Sonowal said that Assam's growth rate is the highest in the whole country during this period, which underscores the success of the government's proactive economic policies. Excessive tax levied on goods trucks coming into the State at the border checkpoints would be a thing of the past after GST comes into effect, Sonowal added.

Saying that Assam must not remain the perennial consumer and must aspire to become the producer and manufacturer of goods, the Chief Minister stated that the recently held Bamboo Summit showcased how the State's raw products and natural resources like bamboo can be fully utilised for bringing in faster economic progress and creating employment opportunities for the youths of the State.

Stating that the GST regime would encourage the entrepreneurs of the State through the uniform taxation system, Sonowal said GST would bring about much needed transparency to government revenue collection.

Industry Minister Chandra Mohan Patowary,

Speaker of Assam Legislative Assembly Hitenra Nath Goswami along with MLAs of different constituencies were present at the meeting.

Bio fuel from bamboo

Arunachal CM, NRL officials discuss sourcing of raw material

ITANAGAR, May 6: To foster development and utilisation of the bamboo resources in Arunachal Pradesh, Chief Minister Pema Khandu today held discussion with officials from Numaligarh Refinery Limited (NRL), a public sector company, that plans to produce bio fuel using bamboo as major raw material.

The Chief Minister agreed to provide full support to the company in sourcing bamboo from Arunachal that would enable a permanent source of revenue generation for bamboo farmers and communities owning vast bamboo groves in the State.

The Chief Minister advised the officials of NRL to conduct awareness camps for bamboo growers and emphasised imparting skill in bamboo harvesting, processing and storing including equipping them with scientific know-how on growing of bamboo plants.

The meeting also discussed on confusion over legal status of bamboo that faces tussle over whether it is a "tree" or a "grass". Due to non-cohesive policy on bamboo, the country has been left out in reaping any benefits though the country is the world's largest repository of bamboo, particularly the north-eastern States.

Taking note of such concern, Khandu assured that the present government would work towards evolving a conducive policy for furtherance of bamboo sectors in Arunachal.

The meeting noted that if bamboo sector is to be developed, then there is a need to create a 'Bamboo Board' as an overarching institutional arrangement.

The meeting also discussed

In this context, I would strongly urge the bank to set up a regional hub in New Delhi for South Asia region so that a majority of the proposals could be processed speedily," Jaitley said.

Addressing the ADB Board of Governors here, Jaitley said there was need to look at processes and procedures for which most could be done in other regions too. "Many countries in the region have very good systems for social and environmental safeguards with robust legal and regulatory framework."

For quite some time, he said, India has been requesting ADB to adopt country systems in this regard and noted that the bank has recently adopted this in the case of Power Grid Corporation of India.

"While I wholeheartedly welcome this move, let me stress that we need to adopt country systems quickly rather than being contented with adoption of agency system. This will help reduce delays in the run-up to project approvals to a great extent," he said.

Jaitley said that with the emergence of Asian Infrastructure Fund and Ordinary Capital Resources from January 1, 2017, ADB's envelope of available resources has grown bigger and more resources could be made available for Regional Cooperation and Integration initiative of the bank. – IANS

450 girl students hospitalised after chemical leak

NEW DELHI, May 6: Around 450 girl students were hospitalised today after toxic fumes spread due to a chemical leakage at a container depot near two schools in southeast Delhi's Tughlaqabad area. Most of the students were discharged after a few hours, while four of them were kept under observation in the ICU of two hospitals.

The students of Rani Jhansi School and Government Girls' Senior Secondary School, run by the city administration, were rushed to nearby hospitals as they complained of irritation in eyes and breathlessness this morning.

According to the police, a call was received at 7.35 am about some chemical leakage at the customs area of Tughlaqabad depot, which is located near the schools.

The chemical in the container was imported from China and was to be taken to Sonipat in Haryana, it was said. The affected students were taken to four hospitals — Hamdard Institute of Medical Sciences and Research, Apollo, Batra and ESC — after the leakage was reported around 7.20 am at the customs area of Tughlaqabad depot, which is located near the schools.

"They came with complaints of irritation in eyes, breathlessness and pain in abdomen. All of them were admitted and put on conservative treatment," said officials of Hamdard Institute of Medical Sciences and Research, where around 250 children, aged between 9 and 15, were admitted.

However, two children are still hospitalised in the ESIC and recuperating in the ICU, the doctors treating them said.

Apollo Hospital authorities said the condition of 42 children and an adult who are admitted is stable. "Therapeutic interventions as per clinical requirements were administered on them. Currently, all patients are in a stable condition," Apollo said in a statement.

As soon as the children came, the disaster plan in the hospital was activated immediately and a temporary special disaster ward was created in the waiting area, Apollo Hospital officials said. "The patients were managed appropriately according to their clinical condition and kept under observation till required," they added.

Among 55 children admitted between 10-14 years were admitted to Batra hospital in Tughlaqabad Institutional area at 8.20 am. Two children, who had come with complaints of breathing difficulty, were admitted to its paediatric ICU.

"The condition of all the children, including the two who are admitted in the ICU, is stable. They are currently under observation and likely to be discharged in three to four hours," said a senior doctor of the hospital. One child was also referred to Safdarjung Hospital.

As the news broke, Union Health Minister JP Nadda instructed all Centre-run hospitals to be ready to help the victims. A team of doctors from AIIMS has been put on stand-by to cater to any emergency.

The Delhi Government ordered a magisterial probe into the incident. Police have registered an FIR in the matter under various sections of the IPC and the Environment (Protection) Act. - PTI

BJP asks Nitish to act against Lalu

NEW DELHI, May 6: The BJP today asked Bihar Chief Minister Nitish Kumar to break his "eloquent silence" and take action against his ally, Lalu Prasad, over the purported telephonic conversation the latter had with jailed gangster Mohammad Shahabuddin.

Union minister Ravi Shankar Prasad accused the RJD chief of breaking the law by "shamelessly" hobnobbing with a man convicted of murder and accused in over 30 serious cases, saying the development was a textbook case of Constitutional impropriety.

"Nitish Kumar, a crime has been committed. Are you going to launch criminal proceedings against your ally, Lalu Prasad?" he asked at a press conference.

Bihar BJP president Nitin and RJD demanded Kumar's resignation, saying the report exposed the criminal-government nexus in Bihar.

Prasad used the occasion to take a swipe at the Opposition parties over their attempts to force unity against the ruling BJP — PTI

Women ...

The number of women inspectors too is much less and records suggest that only nine women police personnel were inducted into the rank of inspectors during the period.

The number of women sub-inspectors inducted into both unarmed and armed branches of Assam Police stands at 102 and 17 respectively. The highest increase in strength has been recorded in the post of women constable with nearly 1,400 inductions.

"Assam, as per a study done recently, ranks the lowest when it comes to women representation in police, which cannot be an encouraging sign. With the State Government mulling to increase the reservation for women in government jobs to 50 per cent, it could also have a positive bearing in the police force," a senior official said.

Notifying learning outcomes is essential to set benchmarks for competencies as this will make the teachers accountable and responsible. In addition, parents should also know about the level of learning that a child must achieve in each class, the minister said.

He added that the 10-year-old NCERT books will be revised and feedbacks from the teaching community have been sought to modify, improve and update them.

The minister, expressing his concern over the falling standards of education, asserted that quality education is the key to nation's progress. Teachers' accountability, students' discipline and community participation can change the scenario, he said.

Earlier, Prabhu participated in a centralised event to mark the commencement of railway electrification work between Raninagar Jalpaiguri and Guwahati. The event also witnessed the commissioning of a 700-Kwp solar power plant at Guwahati Railway Station, inauguration of first class and second class waiting halls at Harmati station, and inauguration of the RO Plant and Digital Chart Display System at the New Tinsukia station.

Rail Vikas Nigam Ltd, a Mini Ratna PSU under the Ministry of Railways, has been entrusted with the task of execution of the electrification project at a total cost of Rs 655.55 crore. Under it, the 382-km route will be electrified.

Prabhu said the Railway Ministry will also consider introduction of a special train that will cover all the major holy places visited by Mahaparinirvan Srimanta Sankaradeva during his years of wandering across the country.

Prabhu's comments in this regard came after Governor Banwarilal Purohit, during his speech at the function, urged the Railway Minister to introduce such a train which will cover all the major religious practices said such steps can go a long way in addressing the employment issue among local youths of the region.

Section 6A before the Supreme Court for protecting the rights of lakhs of people," a memorandum submitted to Singh said.

"The preparation of the National Register of Citizens (NRC) in Assam shall bury the issue of foreigners in the State. The Central Government has started work for preparation of the NRC based on March 25, 1971 as the cut-off date according to Section 6A of the Citizenship Act.

"Some vested interest approached the Supreme Court by filing a writ petition challenging the constitutional validity of Section 6A. The Division Bench of the Supreme Court has on December 17, 2014 directed the authorities to complete the process of NRC based on 1971 as the cut-off year and further framed 13 issues in respect of the constitutional validity of Section 6A," it said.

The Congress party expressed the apprehension that if Section 6A of the Citizenship Act was struck down by the Constitution Bench, then the entire exercise of preparation of the NRC will become futile. In case of striking down of Section 6A, lakhs of people will be affected and become stateless, it said.

Meanwhile, the Congress delegation urged Rahul Gandhi to take up the issue at the Central level given the gravity of the situation.

'Salty' reality

Too much salt intake during teenage years ups the risk of stroke later, says a study

Too much salt in adolescents' diet may adversely affect their blood vessels, increasing the risk for cardiovascular diseases such as heart attack and stroke, during adulthood, a study said.

Too much salt caused measurable changes in their blood vessels that led to arterial stiffness, or hardening of the arteries – early signs of cardiovascular disease.

Further, higher average daily sodium intake was associated with lower brachial artery (BrachD), located in the upper arm and higher pulse wave velocity (PWV).

Both these readings indicate higher levels of stiffness in both peripheral arteries in the extremities, as well as in central arteries, tied to higher sodium consumption.

"Our study suggests adolescents and young adults with higher-than-recommended amounts of salt in their diet may translate into changes in the body that put them at higher risk for future heart attack and stroke," said Elaine M Urhina, Director at Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center in Ohio, US.

The findings were presented at the 2017 Pediatric Academic Societies Meeting in San Francisco.

For the study, the team involved 775 participants who were measured for the elasticity or distensibility of their brachial artery (BrachD), located in the upper arm. Pulse wave velocity (PWV) was also measured for differences in the speed that blood travelled between their carotid artery in the neck and femoral artery in the groin.

The amount of sodium they consumed was measured with self-reported, three-day diet records. – IANS

Syria fighting eases as safe zones plan begins

BEIRUT, May 6: Fighting eased in Syria today after a deal signed by government backers Russia and Iran and rebel supporter Turkey to create four "de-escalation zones" began to take effect.

The multi-phase plan, signed on Thursday in the Kazakh capital Astana, is one of the more ambitious efforts to bring an end to Syria's six-year conflict.

It provides for a ceasefire, rapid deliveries of humanitarian aid and the return of refugees after the creation of "de-escalation zones" across stretches of eight Syrian provinces.

Those zones would see a halt to hostilities, including air strikes, and proposes the deployment of "third-party" monitoring forces.

It began coming into effect at midnight (2100 GMT Friday), according to Russia, but co-sponsors have until June 4 to finalise the zones' borders.

The four main battlegrounds covered are the northwestern province of Idlib, parts of central Syria, the south, and the opposition enclave of Eastern Ghouta near Damascus.

Some of those areas had already seen a drop in violence by Saturday.

The skies were quiet over Idlib province, AFP's correspondent said Saturday afternoon, but residents were anxious that the evening would bring renewed bombardment.

Syrian government warplanes could be heard from Eastern Ghouta around mid-day on Saturday, according to an AFP correspondent in the rebel-held town of Douma.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said there were skirmishes and shelling in several rebel-held areas in the central province of Hama and in Eastern Ghouta.

"Despite these violations, we can still say that hostilities have dropped," said Observatory head Ramy Abdel Rahman.

The Britain-based Observatory said it had recorded no civilian casualties yet on Saturday, but that several fighters were killed in regime bombardment of Daraa and Aleppo provinces in the first reported deaths since the deal came into effect.

Several ceasefire deals have been agreed since Syria's conflict broke out in March 2011 but they have failed to permanently stem the fighting. - AFP

Unadkat's 5-wkt haul steers RPS to 2nd spot

HYDERABAD, May 6: Paceman Jaydev Unadkat revelled in a five-wicket haul that included a hat-trick as Rising Pune Supergiant eked out a 12-run win over Sunrisers Hyderabad to jump to the second spot in IPL, here today.

Defending a modest 148, the Pune outfit came up with a superb bowling performance with Unadkat (5/30) and Ben Stokes (3/30) doing the maximum damage, especially in the final overs to restrict Hyderabad to 136 for nine in 20 overs.

Unadkat took a hat-trick in the final over of the match when Hyderabad needed 13 runs, to shut the door on the hosts.

He sent back Bipul Sharma, Rashid Khan and Bhuvneshwar Kumar in the second, third and fourth deliveries of the 20th over respectively. It was third hat-trick of the season.

At one stage, defending champions were cruising along comfortably when veteran Yuvraj Singh (47) and skipper

David Warner (40) were at the crease.

The duo put on 54 runs together for the third wicket before Warner departed for 40 which was studded with four hits to the fence and a six.

Yuvraj continued to play his shots but failed to take the team all the way home, falling for 43-ball 47 that included four boundaries and two sixes, with the scorecard reading 117 for five.

After Yuvraj's departure, 32 more runs needs for victory and as many as five wickets in hand, but no lower-order batsmen seem to show any resistance, even as Unadkat took three successive wickets in the final over to wrap up the match in Pune's favour.

KKR take on RCB with eye on IPL play-off

BENGALURU, May 6: Smarting from successive defeats, an under-pressure Kolkata Knight Riders will look to regain their momentum and remain in the hunt for the knockout stage when they clash with laggards Royal Challengers Bangalore in an IPL encounter here tomorrow.

Kolkata Knight Riders, who suffered losses against Sunrisers Hyderabad and Rising Pune Supergiant in the last two matches, need two wins out of the remaining three matches to seal their berth in the play-off.

The two-time champions are placed second in the table with 14 points out of 11 matches, followed by RPS and Sunrisers at 14 and 13 points.

During their last meeting, KKR had handed out a 82-run defeat to RCB after bowing them out for 49 – the lowest score in IPL history – and Gautam Gambhir's men would look to repeat the performance tomorrow.

In the next two matches, KKR will be facing a resurgent Kings XI Punjab, who registered a thrilling 19-run victory against RCB last night in a low-scoring game, and a formidable Mumbai Indians, who were the first team to qualify for play-off with 16 points, in 10 matches.

Rookie batsman Rahul Tripathi of RPS has delivered an electrifying match-winning innings of 93 to stand in the way of KKR after they were restricted to 155 for eight.

Gambhir's side lost by four wickets and the defeat could be a reality check for the Kolkata side as their top order collapsed in the last match, while Colin de Grandhomme (56) and Manish Pandey (37) saved the day.

KKR so far have been cashing in on Sunil Narine's hit-and-miss experiment at the top. When Narine gets going,

Rupinderpal's brace seals bronze for India

IPOH (Malaysia), May 6: Rupinderpal Singh converted two penalty corners as India outclassed New Zealand 4-0 to clinch a bronze medal in the 26th Sultan Shah Cup, here today.

Rupinderpal sent identical ground drag-flicks into the corner past New Zealand goalkeeper Richard Joyce's outstretched right hand in the 17th and 27th minutes.

SV Sunil then scored his first goal of the tournament in the 48th minute as he capitalised on a cross from Mandeep Singh into the goalmouth, while Talwinder Singh rounded off India's scoring in the last minute.

Earlier, Malaysia defeated Japan 3-1 in the playoff to decide the fifth place in the tournament standings.

Having failed to earn a place in the final after a listless show in the last preliminary league encounter against Malaysia yesterday, India gave an improved display to clinch the bronze medal – a shade below their silver medal behind Australia in the tournament last year. — PTI

No I-League, ISL merger soon: AIFF

MUMBAI, May 6: The All India Football Federation today ruled out an immediate merger of the I-League and the Indian Super League, deciding that the former will remain the country's top-tier tournament for the next two-three years.

AIFF President Praful Patel today heard presentations on the matter from Mohun Bagan and East Bengal in a meeting here.

"I-League will remain the official league, while the Indian Super League will be expanded into a seven-month long tournament to be played in the weekends. There will be a unified league. We will take a call after two-three years," said an AIFF source.

Earlier, it was mooted that ISL will be named the official league with 11 teams, including Bengaluru FC, East Bengal and Mohun Bagan.

But the idea did not go down well especially after Aizawl FC won the I-League in a historic final. The Mizoram outfit threatened fast unto death if they were to be relegated.

Despite being the champions, Aizawl FC would have been relegated if ISL was made the top-tier league as they did not have any place in the franchise league. — PTI

FIFA president Infantino congratulates Aizawl FC

NEW DELHI, May 6: World football governing body FIFA President Gianni Infantino has congratulated Aizawl FC for winning the I-League title.

In a letter to All India Football Federation president Praful Patel, Infantino said, "It gives me great pleasure to send my warmest congratulations to Aizawl FC for their first ever league title."

"This title is the result of the determination of everyone involved and my congratulations go to the players, the coach, the administrator, the entire technical and medical staff as well as the fans for this great achievement," Infantino wrote.

"On behalf of the entire football community, I would like to thank Aizawl FC and your association for helping to spread the positive message of football," he added. — PTI

AIFF academy to meet EB in U-18 I-League final

KOLKATA, May 6: The AIFF Elite Academy and East Bengal will vie for the U-18 I-League football title when they meet in the final at the Barasat Stadium on Sunday.

AIFF Elite Academy will be chasing their third successive title while East Bengal look to capture their first U-18 I-League title, marking their maiden appearance in the final.

On the scale of performances, there is nothing much to separate the two sides as Elite Academy and East Bengal reached the final after beating strong opponents in the semifinals.

Elite Academy secured their spot in the final after surviving a marathon penalty shoot-out against United Sports Club. Their custodian Samik Mitra played a crucial role with three saves in the shoot-out.

East Bengal on the other hand, edged past Salgaocar FC courtesy a fine brace from Suraj Singh along with a goal from Bidyashagar Singh.

Elite Academy coach Floyd Pinto sounded confident ahead of the summit clash.

"There is absolutely no pressure on the team. The team has confidence in its ability to win the final against East Bengal," he said.

"It will be a tough game against a strong team but I can assure all that players are ready. My players show that they are hungry for victory and the title."

"I am proud of my players and what they have shown during this tournament. It will be great if they win the title," the 31-year-old coach added.

Elite Academy prefer to sit back and strike on the counter-attack. They have frustrated many teams with this style of play as they come up with quick counter-attacks orchestrated by their skipper Edmund Lalindika. Furthermore, the likes of Zounamawia, Lalengzama Vangchia, Naorem Roshan Singh and Amal Das will add depth to the squad. — IANS

Sevilla, Real Sociedad battle to 1-1 draw

Sevilla FC's midfielder Pablo Sarabia (C) scores for his team against Real Sociedad in the Spanish La Liga soccer match at Sanchez Pizjuan Stadium in Seville, Spain, on Friday.

Real Sociedad, meanwhile, pulls level on points with Athletic Club in the fight for sixth and the accompanying Europa League berth, though the Bilbao squad have a game in hand and a significant advantage in goal difference.

BHASWATI K. GOSWAMI meets two young people out on a memorable adventure.

The first reaction was a protective urge. They were just a little older than my firstborn and so innocently charming. "Everywhere we go we are asked about Tomatina and bull fights, with young people singing the popular Bollywood number Serota. Of course, we thoroughly enjoyed it. We did watch Zindagi Na Milegi Dobara before coming to India. We did not want to disappoint Indians, but we actually do not identify with these typically Spanish traits as we are from Catalonia, a region in Spain with its own language, culture and traditions. Although bull fights are still popular in some parts of Spain, in Catalonia, it has been prohibited because of animal rights". Indeed, the Catalan Independence Movement is a political and popular movement, which seeks independence of Catalonia from Spain. I could sense that my young friends felt quite strongly about this self-determination movement.

Clara Gene Skrabeck and Mariona Siryol - who recently volunteered with C-NES' Boat Clinics, have just graduated from medical school at the University of Barcelona, San Clara. "I was born and raised in Barcelona, but my mother, Simona Skrabeck, a writer by profession, is Slovenian and I keep in close contact with my family there". Mariona was born in a little village in the North of Spain called Figueres, where she grew up and moved to Barcelona at the age of 18 to study at the university.

India has attracted them, they quite a while. At the same time, they also wanted to see how different the medical practice would be in such different and difficult conditions such as those where the Boat Clinics operate. Mariona fell in love with the country years ago, when her aunt - who travelled around India many times - told her stories about the country, while Clara has a few Indian friends through whom she got to know a bit about Indian cuisine and culture. The girls confess that they are Bollywood fans. "A very useful topic to break the ice with the people who do not speak much English here," they smile and say. They add, "Even though we have limited experience, we are motivated to learn and help those seeking assistance, which is after all our point of view, clinical practice adapts to the patients, the diseases and resources in hand, which can be very different from one country to another. We strongly believe that having taken part in the Boat Clinic health outreach programme will enrich our future medical career as well as our personal development."

Emotional about their stay in Assam, they say that this visit has changed them much. They volunteered with C-NES' Boat Clinics in river island villages across four districts - Kamrup, Morigaon, Jorhat and Dibrugarh. They interacted with the health teams and beneficiaries in each district through local translators, even learnt basic Assamese and were amazed to see the variety in culture and beliefs among the island dwellers. They observed how awareness sessions on health, hygiene and social issues were held in health camps in remote areas, including lessons for women that are changing their ways of living for the better. In Morigaon, they were told that a few years ago newborns were given cow's milk instead of being breastfed. Constant awareness has brought a change and now young mothers know the importance of breastfeeding. In Dibrugarh, they saw how nurses taught the villagers about the importance of children's vaccination. They add, "During this experience, we learnt that health care makes much more sense when it is centred on people's needs, rather than just repeating the same standard model. In addition, the care is perfectly adapted to the communities and their special needs. We learnt that it is actually more important to build trust and reach more people than to follow a thorough protocol." They come from a country where public health is absolutely free for the underprivileged. Even drugs for the elderly and poor are free and public hospitals with the latest update and technology are mostly preferred. They were appalled at the state of the public (Govt.) hospitals here, at the same time appreciating the immense population pressure which they handle.

Apart from the Boat Clinic experience, they could just about explore a little bit of this State which fascinated them. What made them panic was the traffic, the utter disregard of traffic rules, admitting that they gradually got used to the "crazy driving". Says Clara, "We absolutely loved the food, although our tummies are still reluctant to adapt to the spicy food. We have not had the opportunity to do many touristy activities, but visiting Kaziranga and the Kamakhya Temple have left us speechless. Overall, Assam is a beautiful region with unbelievably welcoming and amazing people. We realised that Indian society is based around the family. Even in buses and trains, people do not hesitate to ask personal questions. In our society, these questions are not normally asked as introductory statements. Again after getting to know us for just a while, people open the doors to their homes, they cook food for us without spices and make us miss our families a little less. Along the way we have asked people why they do so. The answer is always the same. "We treat guests like gods." So we go back with the original, "Atithi Devo Bhava".

Search for truth

Suffering! It is the feeling which we may say is the precursor of Buddhism. Yes, it is the miserable sight of disease, old age, and death that troubled and stirred the young mind of Siddhartha Gautama, and that finally got him to change his hitherto notion of human life.

The basic truths of life that the Buddha was enlightened with were: Life is a disquieting struggle, its origin is vice, passions, the final goal is eternal quiescence, and there is a way that leads to the goal. Thus, at the root of human suffering is evil passions, of which greed, hatred and delusion are the most deplorable. They are called the three evil roots or Trishna mula (in Pali). Of the three, anger/ignorance is the most fundamental and it precedes the rest. It is the unawareness of the true nature of things. It is the mischief-maker that makes us think the inputs of the senses to be permanent. Under its spell, we get attached to the things around us, being ignorant of the fact that they come to us because of a cause, in the absence of which they will cease to be with us. And we suffer when we get separated from them.

Attachment to the objects of desire is commonplace in human life. In his early life, Prince Siddhartha was also deluded by the short-lived charms of material life. Life was, to him, only the enjoyments that a royal life could give him as a prince. Having led a structured life designed by his father Shuddhodhana, he was exposed to the pleasant things only and had always been away from all sorts of miseries. For Shuddhodhana was afraid lest his son would develop dispassion for worldly life and choose an austere life as was predicted by the astrologer. But as they say, destiny has its own plan. Siddhartha got to see the truths of life - aging, decaying and death. This, in time, gave him a new direction in his life.

In this new phase of life, Siddhartha Gautama went to several gurus for guidance. But, none of their supervision seemed to lead him directly to his goal. His initial contemplation left him with the understanding that the cause of our suffering lies within ourselves and hence, none but we can be the masters of ourselves so far as the removal of our miseries is concerned. We suffer because of our thoughts - the thoughts that we construct out of the very short-lived inputs derived through the channels of our senses. As the Buddha said, "We are what we think. All that we are arises with our thoughts. With our thoughts, we make the world."

To walk the path, the Buddha used his super-sharp concentration as his tool. With this time-tested method, he tried to attain a state of mind that can see things without any prejudices and thus, can accept the true nature of everything. This is the state of enlightenment or Nirvana (in Sanskrit) after attainment of which Prince Siddhartha was known as the Buddha (the Enlightened One).

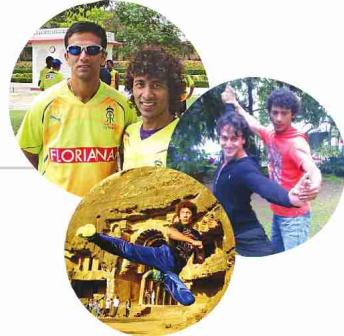

One striking feature of the Buddha's life is that he was born, attained Nirvana, and left his mortal body on the same day, i.e., on the day of Buddha Purnima. As the three great events of the Buddha's life took place on this day, it is called the Thrice Blessed Day. To commemorate these three major events of the Buddha's life, Buddhists across the world celebrate Buddha Purnima with great sincerity and devotion. This festival is known by various names - Buddha Jayanti, Vesak, Waisak, Haramatsuri, Hari Wesak, Kason Wesak, Visakha Puja and Saga Dawa, etc.

Suffering is passion-born. But passions co-exist with humans. Thus, to save ourselves from the feeling of suffering, we have to train our mind constantly and, thus, to help it know the truth that passion and its offshoots are short-lived.

DEEPAK DAS takes his art to a whole new level.

Art is a way of life. Ever since humans have started to express their creative minds through their physical body, various art forms have evolved. Starting from dance to the various styles of martial art, art and culture have transformed the world into a better place. Such a dynamic and unique personality is Deepak Das, whose unusual journey from being a martial art expert to becoming an action director and then developing his own art form "Tao Power Yogi" will really engage you.

Born and brought up in the magnificent Northeastern homeland, he stepped into the world of martial arts in the year 1988, when he started learning Chinese martial arts. After attaining training for a decade in various forms of martial arts, it became his passion and in order to pursue his dreams, he landed in Mumbai, in 1999, with the dream to become a fight choreographer. At first, he began teaching Wushu, Tai Chi and Karate to celebrities like Diana Hayden, Kabir Bedi, Pooja Bedi, Kiran Rao, Suman Ranganathan, Nandita Das and Kelly Dorji. Eventually, he made his way into directing fight sequences for popular Indian television shows like Pritibhraj Chauhan - Star Plus, Arshaan - Sony, Dharam Veer - NDTV Imagine, Shakuntala - Star Plus Vijay, Chandragupta Maurya - Imagine TV, Veer Shivaji - Colors, Buddha - ZeeTV, Maharana Pratap for Sony, and Savitri, Jaan and Mahadev for Life OK.

Being a very passionate and dedicated martial artiste, Deepak Das has specialised in 20 forms. He was trained in Tai Chi, Chi Kung, Ba Duan Jin, Ba Ji Quan, Ba Gua Zhang, Fangbiu Chen, 5 Organs Chi Kung, Ta Tao and Fu Chen directly under Master Yuan Xiu Gang. Incidentally, he is the only Indian to have learnt Internal Martial Arts in the Wudang Mountains, China, the birthplace of Tai Chi. During his internal martial arts training in China (2009), he realised that no single form was giving him internal, external and mental fitness. Since yoga can provide internal fitness to the body, he combined yoga, martial arts and meditation to develop a totally new form of art known as "Tao Power Yogi (TPY)". TPY seems very tough when someone is doing it but by the time it gets over, one is filled with energy and freshness. He received positive response from people about TPY, so he started advancing it further. He has a desire to take TPY to the common people.

His ultimate turning point was when he got the opportunity to train his Tao Power Yogi to the Rajasthan Royals IPL team in 2012. He was very fortunate to train world class players like Rahul Dravid, Shane Warne, Jacob Oram, Shaun Tait and many others. Later on, he got to train at the Celebrity Cricket League (2013); he trained Ritesh Deshmukh's team Veer Maratha and Manoj Tiwari's Bhopuri Dabangg team. Deepak Das is also the man behind new generation action star Tiger Shroff's mind-blowing action skills. He had personally trained Tiger for many years. Recently, he has trained Kriti Sanon for her upcoming flick Raabta.

Having experience for almost 30 years, he is also specialised in various other styles like Wushu, Karate Budokan International, Commando Combat, Kickboxing, Muay Thai, MMA and Chinese secret martial arts technique trained by renowned Master Chuha Walling, a fifth dan black belt holder from Malaysia. He is also an expert in using weapons like sword (single and double), sticks, spears, horse whisk, monk spade and Ta Tao. Moreover, he has an outstanding understanding of yoga and meditation.

Presently, he is in Guwahati, working on an inspiring movie which will be written and directed by him. Although he doesn't want to disclose its title, he says that the movie will undeniably reflect the sensitive issues of the Northeastern people. Being a Northeasterner, he wants to highlight our majestic homeland and focus on the challenges faced by our native folks outside. He strongly feels that the people of India should know about the culture and traditions of the Northeastern states.

Feminism this, feminism that

When the sun set on Feministur, it was scattered with bits and pieces of broken masculine pride. The wind swept and circled, carrying the dust with it, making it look like a light brown, hazy hologram. There were the ends of rusty old lipsticks sticking out from the chests, arms and thighs of the beaten men, who were bleeding profusely. It sure looked like a gold rush, but desi El Dorado here was a mess of abusive, gauche female goons, their kurtis dancing with the wind, a menacing grin on each of their faces, their birds shaped to the likeness of beautiful grenades, their curly, straight and wavy hair tied neatly and ruthlessly to avoid beating about their faces, and the clang of their metallic earrings created an eerie vibration. The men searched for Mard, their leader, but he was found underneath a pile of stockings, with one such villainous thing wrapped tightly around his neck, causing his tongue to stick out.

This is the fantasy of every man-hating feminist. Or should I say, alleged fantasists? Who is a feminist, by the way? I will not bother to shake Olive Schreiner or Simone de Beauvoir out of their coffins to define a feminist. Feminists can be Darwin's delight, in an odd and strange way. Their evolution and adaptive skills cannot be dismissed as a usual biological and sociological foray, and acclimatisation into modern times, but rather a long struggle to be acknowledged. It was a war against biology, un-men. 'All men are dogs', this micro observation of our 'stronger' sex is often attributed to this feminist, because half-baked notions are sexy, eh?

The 'he' feminist, where is he? Some joke that he does his wife's laundry, while others muse how his face must be a hairless wonder, with high feminine features. 'He' is supposed to be a traitor who has failed his fellow deepest, darkest corners of our minds. But 'he', like our 'she' is also misinterpreted. Not all 'she' feminists are products of a disturbed household with alcoholic fathers bashing up their mothers, or dominating imbecile brothers giving a sermon against mini skirts; some of them are brought up by incredible men. These men form the other half of the feminist camp. They are the 'he' feminists. The whole no-fair economics and chauvinistic workplace rules, as was evident from the waves of Feminist Movements, which are recorded and repeated in textbooks, and what this simply stands for is 'equality' between the sexes. But all we hear are stories about the typical Indian feminist who is supposedly a kurti-clad frump, hot tempered and ready to explode at the slightest provocation. This is the general picture of the 'she' feminist. The 'he' isn't even thought to exist, let alone given due credit. This desi feminist is the butt of internet jokes, and always rebuked for 'her' general hatred towards men, the imaginary manifestation of the local impotent, slightly hen-pecked, sobbing right from birth, to howling in his funeral pyre, still holding a dirty dish that need cleaning. This is the 'he' feminist of our Indian imagination. We would love to strip him bare and wrap a sari around his sorry figure instead. This is what we would have loved to do to 'him', except we have got it all wrong. Who is 'he'? One word – feminist. It is like committing male foeticide while describing a feminist. The idea of being a male and being a feminist is like Voldemort's curse, it shouldn't even wander inside the tion of feminism is so twisted that we refuse to go any further, sometimes even falling prey to society's prejudices, and judge every man with the traditional 'un'-feminist, pretentious looking glass.

Anybody can be a feminist: the sleepy guy inside the bus, the shy girl who snores, the woman who sweats by Dolce and Gabbana, the man with the weird haircut, and even your annoying neighbour. Feminism is beautiful, because it stands for equality. It is the age of distortion, one may calmly remark, quietly hoping that next time someone describes a feminist, it wouldn't be a disaster.

Form codependent relationship: The Oxford Dictionary defines codependency as: "Excessive emotional or psychological reliance on a partner." In a gaslighting relationship, the gaslighter elicits constant insecurity and anxiety in the gaslightee, thereby, pulling the gaslightee by the strings. The gaslighter has the power to grant acceptance, approval, respect, safety, and security.

Give false hope: As a manipulative tactic, the gaslighter will occasionally stay the victim with mildness, moderation, and even superficial kindness or remorse, to give the gaslightee false hope.

But beware! The temporary mildness is often a calculated manoeuvre intended to instill complacency and have the victim's guard down, before the next act of gaslighting begins. With this tactic, the gaslighter also further reinforces a codependent relationship.

Dominate and control: At its extreme, the ultimate objective of a pathological gaslighter is to control, dominate, and take advantage of another individual, or a group, or even an entire society.

Shoes for work

I don't believe there should be such a thing as a 'work shoe'! Think about it. Why should there have to be a particular style, colour or design that only suits work? The work shoe is a look that has been created by office professionals, companies and society. It's a shoe that fits into an image and that image is plain, dark and not at all flattering!

I've done it myself. For the office, whether you agree or not, you need to look professional and smart. Personally, I think you need to be comfortable. What do you look for when you choose a shoe? Maybe a heel, but it will always be pretty plain and probably dark.

What about colours? Now I know you maybe can't go to the office looking smart with a bright orange or turquoise pair of shoes shouting from the bottom of your legs. But you can choose shoes that not only make you look fabulous, but still fit into the smart professional look.

Before you go any further, always try to choose leather or suede shoes. This is particularly important for work because synthetic materials will make your feet sweat more. Canvas or other fabric just won't work with smart clothes; keep them for the casual look.

Here are some ideas on what colours to choose:

Red looks fantastic when worn with cream or black coloured clothes. Green is the most soothing, calming and easy on the eye, of any colour in the spectrum. But do be careful with the outfit you choose to match.

Everyone should own at least one pair of black shoes. Black works with everything you wear. Black does not have to be boring. Black shoes with diamonds, studs, buckles or bows can add a hint of glamour.

Brown or earthy tones look good with similar coloured clothes.

Maybe you think pink is not suitable for work? Maybe not hot pink, but a delicate rose or baby pink works well with a matching shirt or blouse and a dark suit.

Navy is just navy. It works best only with white. During Spring and summer, white works well with just about any colour. Try not to mix too many colours at once though!

Now you have an idea on colour, think about styles. Heels are always a good option because they give you so many benefits. A little height, great posture. Remember though, you are likely to be wearing them all day, so you're probably better off opting for only a couple of inches in height, at most. Wedge heels are an absolute must for this summer. They are very fashionable, have all the advantages of a heel but are far easier to walk in and are far more comfortable. They come in many colours and fabrics, so you'll be sure to match some with something.

Round or open-toed shoes with a wedge heel and ankle strap look fabulous with a knee-length skirt. Pointed toes lengthen your overall look whether worn with trousers or a skirt, therefore, give the illusion of greater height. Kitten heels are great to wear for work because they only have a one- or two-inch heel. They are comfortable, but look chic and stylish. Choose a different colour with perhaps a buckle or strap detail across the front, to add interest.

The sky is painted in a perching hue of crimson, with the sun playing Peek-a-boo among the clouds before it fades into the oblivion of the vast horizon afar. The tall pines that stand upright on the hill slopes are glistening in the last rays of the sun, until the moonlight comes and soaks them up in its radiance. I can see the birds forming huddles in the maw of the sky – heading towards the cosiness of their nests before the darkness envelops them into its nothingness. It is a cold winter evening in Shillong and I stand there in the balcony of my bungalow feeling the gentle lashes of the breeze kissing my face. Kahin door jab din dhal jave..., the record croons in the background in the melancholic voice of Jagjit Singh. It is in the last hours of the dusk that I feel a sense of inexplicable contentment – a feeling beyond words, as such I feel my soul liberated in the wilderness of the valley below. Sometimes solitude brings with it an amazing plethora of emotions, some reminiscences of the past and ruminations of the present as I see my own life-cycle evolving from the sunny days of youth and entering into the dark tunnels of middle age, and I stand there like the last hours of the evening, like the red blot on the sky that spreads so widely before it turns into grim black.

There is a chill in the breeze which forces me to go indoors. I wrap a cashmere shawl around my shoulders and sit in the rocking chair in front of the crackling fireplace, letting the warmth pervade through me. I pick the bottle of red wine that is lying on the table alongside my chair and take a sip, then another, until my head starts getting lighter with every sip. Was it the smoke from the fire or the alcohol in my body, but my eyes get all heavy, as if I am about to be drawn into a deep sedation of a kind. But the mind refuses to give in. It brings back events from the past. The last I can remember is the wooden walls of the mansion surrounding me until my eyes are forced shut and the past runs in front of me like celluloid in motion.

It was in this beautiful hill station that I met him for the first time. I was very young, undergoing my graduation and he arrived one day with his friends. I still remember how my friends and I were ogling at his group. They were all very young boys and they had arrived from the plains for some kind of an excursion. I heard they were here to collect specimens of wild leaves for some project, and I would not lie if I said I was then bewildered by this fact. Nevertheless, they came to our classroom and the professor introduced them to us. Ours was a girl's college and they had no option but to come and befriend the girls. I felt he was the most handsome of the lot. He came and introduced himself to me. I was a little taken aback initially. But once I started talking to him, all my inhibitions were driven away. And this introduction and formal talk gradually gave way to something deeper. I started meeting him more frequently. We used to go on long walks in the late hours of the evening, making our way through the maze of tall pines. He used to talk about life in the plains, about his people, and I enjoyed it thoroughly, all his anecdotes, I myself never having gone out from the confines of my State. Thus, a month passed away in the wink of an eye.

And it was his time to return where he came from. The day finally arrived and he was packing his bags when I went to meet him with a handmadecard, saying, "It is not a goodbye, it is a hope of meeting you again in the future some day," with the picture of a setting sun. He took the card from my hands and I could see it in his eyes, that same unspoken grief which was laden in my heart at the thought of parting. His eyes were moist and then suddenly he held my hand for the first time ever. "I shall come back for you. You have lent meaning to my mundane life." Saying so, he kissed my hands and rushed to his bus, looking back to wave me goodbye. I stood rooted to the spot, feeling the ground sink under me.

"Mensahib, dinner is ready, come and have it," the voice of my domestic help wakes me up from my slumber. She is a young girl in her mid-teens. Her father left her mother when she was just an infant. After that it was only she and her mother. I helped her learn some English and Mathematics.

She speaks in the local dialect. "Mensahib, the other day, you were telling about how you and sahib met, and then what happened?"

I clear my throat and start speaking about the eventualities of my life turning the leaves of the chapters, being a little perplexed though, how my life could stir interest in a girl so naive as her.

"So, he returned, this time asking me to be his partner forever. The fact that he kept his promise drove me to elation for I, too, was passionately in love with him. However, it was hard to make his parents agree. After a series of deliberations that seemed like eternity, we finally tied the nuptial knot. And he took me along with him to his place. Initially, I felt lost in the crowd of so many unknown faces that stared at me. I was the new bride from the hills. I could hear snide remarks behind my back about my looks, my demeanour, my accent, but all these did not demoralise me as long as he had my back.

"Time started flying and very soon I had his baby in me. It was a moment of jubilation for the entire household and as for me, I bloomed in this heavenly feeling of motherhood. The ecstasy it brought along was beyond comprehension – the kind that could only be understood by the one who has experienced it. The world suddenly seemed a new place for me, a paradise of sorts, as the baby inside me growing as if it was counting its days to open its eyes to a new world awaiting him. Basking in the glory of parenthood, we started deciding names for the baby, debating on whether it would be a Mama's boy or Papa's little princess. The love that we had for each other will now have a concrete form, the child of our dreams.

"I was seven months pregnant and one night, suddenly, I started having terrible convulsions. Having bouts of pain during this period was nothing so uncommon, but this time, it was unbearable. It was like my entire body was writhing in pain – a pain so intense that it choked my senses and all I could do was scream out aloud, awakening the household. He woke up, hearing my panic-stricken cries. People gathered around me, scurrying around to take me to the hospital. This was the last thing I could remember of that fateful night. The pain engulfed me so much that I lost my senses, only to wake up in the hospital room."

“Why is it an onus on girls to uphold tradition through their dress?”

The Constitution of India gives citizens the rights to freedom in Articles 19, 20, 21 and 22. However, fact remains that we are far from free. Let us take the example of clothing. More often than not, women are not free to choose what to wear. In fact, women's clothing is the most commonly blamed aspect for rapes and gender-based crimes. While women are seen as the 'weaker' sex, the ones of not 'provoking' through forms of clothing remains on women. Why? Because men are so weak that they cannot control their own violent tendencies! Point to note is that only men get so provoked by what the other gender wears that they resort to violence. It is never the other way round! And the ironic aspect is that women are forced into wearing attire that is supposed to be the repository of tradition, whereas men are not subjected to strictness. Let's change the rules of the game.

— Dr. Sriparna Pathak,
Centre for Southeast Asian Studies,
Dept. of Political Science, Gauhati University.

To say that it is an onus on girls to preserve tradition through their dress is a guise to hide the larger callous process of 'moral policing'. In a world where girls' spectrum of choices is rapidly enlarging, the guardians of patriarchy fear losing their grip upon women. They use terms like 'decency', 'modesty' and 'beauty' in order to emotionally bind the women folk within the limits of tradition. No doubt, when the occasion demands, it is, indeed, gratifying on a girl's part to wear a traditional outfit. But to raise it to the level of 'duty' is a mere tactic to mask hypocrisy.

— Anannya Nath, Jorhat.

A woman is considered to be a form of goddess and she is the one who has been making human existence possible on earth. A woman plays multiple roles in her life, starting from being a daughter to a grandmother. Through this whole journey, she is a constant source of energy, happiness, luck, love, care, trust, belief and one who bears so much pain to keep life running in a family.

A country as well as a community's tradition exists due to this image of her's and that's why it is her responsibility to represent and maintain this image in the most elegant manner possible.

— Animesh Borkotoky, Guwahati.

Patriarchy is a social system in which men appropriate all important social roles, and relegate women to inferior positions. Patriarchy subjugates women by controlling their fertility, sexuality and labour power. In such a system, both Nature and women's bodies are alien; viewed as sites for exploitation and appropriation by men. Thus, a woman's sexuality and fertility are strictly controlled through societal structures like marriage, customs, traditions, religion, family, etc., and the fruits of their labour power (both productive and reproductive) are deemed to be properties of men. Thus, femininity, sexuality and tradition/culture are intricately interwoven in a patriarchal system. Imposing dress codes, etc., on women symbolises the urge and need to control their sexuality, and is used as a weapon to add to their subordination.

— Rubab Fatema Nomani,
DHSK College, Dibrugarh.

Letty Cottin Pogrebin once said, "When men are oppressed, it's a tragedy. When women are oppressed, it's tradition." The root cause of women being portrayed as the first and foremost representative of tradition is patriarchy. Besides, the judgemental mindset of our society is also to be blamed. The character of a girl is decided by the length of her skirt. The fact is constantly ignored that men also reside within the circumference of "cultural representation".

There is only one solution to this intricate social problem, we must change our attitude towards women. Forced coercion of culture and tradition upon one gender by another is an absolute partiality. Instead, all sections of the society, irrespective of gender, caste and creed must come forward to uphold the virtues of culture and tradition.

gentle breeze. Ah! It was delightful to the senses and to my soul. I saw bushes covered with buds ready to explode into colours, new lush green springs and tiny bright leaves that might have opened up soaking the warmth of the morning California sun. It was an extraordinary feeling amidst the humdrum of ordinariness. I never saw nor noticed anything like that from the other side of the street, the pavement where I must have taken thousands of steps in the past couple of months. Yet, everything existed parallel reality. Whatever I noticed today existed yesterday and today, in the present. This experience helped me to draw an insight. It's the birth of a new perspective about life and to go about with a renewed sense of self and confidence.

Sometimes, life makes us stand at the crossroads or we find ourselves at a place without answers. It could be about anything – relationships, job, parenting, travel, career, education, a big decision to be made. At that point, we may lack confidence,

■ My uncle stood as a Guarantor for an education loan taken by his cousin. That cousin is now well-established, with a job – but he has no interest in clearing his debt. Although Uncle has filed a civil case against his cousin, but the case is likely to last long. The bank has now blocked Uncle's salary account for the last five months. Uncle is facing hardship in maintaining his family. Please advise.

ble under the provisions of Law relating to banks/financial institutions and loans/advances, or are mostly agreed upon terms of Loan Agreement executed between the Bank and the Borrower, including his Guarantor. However, the bank is expected to follow certain principles of law while availing any of action for recovery of the loan amount from the borrower himself and all his known property by initiating process under the Securitisation and Reconstruction of Financial Assets and Enforcement of Security Interests (SARFAESI) Act. Question of recovery from the Guarantor comes only as a last resort for the bank, when either no recovery could be made from Borrower or only part of the loan amount could be recovered with a remaining balance. If your uncle's salary account was blocked by the Bank without following the required procedure and without first initiating a process to recover from the Borrower, such action of the bank is improper. Your uncle may approach the Debt Recovery Tribunal under the provisions of the SARFAESI Act, against such improper action of the Bank and get the salary account released.

T he beauty of the extraordinary often lies in its simplicity. Things that appear ordinary to the naked eye can hold the greatest of powers in reality. It's very easy to overlook, for they appear too plain to even notice, yet they brew something grand beneath its surface. As I am writing my thoughts down, a smile is playing on my lips. I feel a sense of peace and appreciation of how beautiful life is. I wonder in awe and breathe in gratitude, thanking the Universe for its eternal wisdom and law, which is accessible for all. The wise has aptly said, 'there are no accidents in life. Everything happens when it has to happen.'

Today, like every day, I went out with my son for our daily walk around the campus. The weather was bright and sunny. The air smelled fresh in anticipation of something good. I always walk around the familiar tracks and the little one enjoys his ride on his tricycle while catching sight of squirrels chasing each other on trees, chirping birds flying around and cars racing on the roads in opposite directions. Sometimes he would wave at strangers and greet them with a musical 'hi', while I exchange voluntary smiles with the passerby. Today was no different, except a slight detour that I decided to take unlike any other day. A thought came to my mind and it said to me, 'You always come back by the same route. Don't you want to try out something new?' I enquired with a counter thought, 'which would be?' The thought that followed next said, 'Ahi! Come on, it's just in front of your eyes, you need to cross the street and walk on the parallel pavement.' I nodded and crossed the Above all, I believe, while doing and rendering our duties, we need to look inwards and believe that everything will work out for us.

The new luxury

The thing about us Indians is that, in general, we are lovers of luxury. True, definitions of luxury differ, according to the economic status of the person concerned. One person's luxury may be another person's absolutely basic need. Obviously, a Mallya's or an Ambani's concept of luxury will be different from yours and mine. The lux items which make us gasp with wonder and envy may be their everyday object. Even so, "luxury", generally speaking, is an aspirational thing.

Indeed, we do have some upside-down concepts of luxury amidst us, but that too is good. For instance, there are the reverse snobs, those who make it a point to turn up their noses at material luxury items, and sneer at those who do have them, judging them as being superficial. This is, of course, not always true. The person who flaunts a Gucci bag, and the other who exhibits her jholas, are, under their skins, motivated by more or less the same intent, that is, to stand out from the crowd. Let's make it clear though that there are those for whom the designer label and the jholas are both part of who they are, and their overall psyche. This piece is not about them.

And yet, in spite of the fact that we are a relatively poor nation, many of us love the physical luxuries. Well, nothing wrong in that either, as long as the money to pay for it is acquired honestly. To save for that beautiful sari costing tens of thousands, and finally buying and then wearing it, brings a joy that only the buyer knows.

But then, it has always been in our blood, this acquisition of luxuries by a few, while the majority make do with very little. Think of the rulers of the princely states of Rajasthan, or Hyderabad. The scale of luxury that those royals indulged in leaves one gasping. Sadly, this can not be denied that the surrounding areas, the hinterlands beyond the palaces look impoverished in the extreme. And think, also, of those mamindars, whose love of luxury was legendary.

Today, though, there is a growing number of people for whom luxury does not mean material acquisitions or physical possessions.

Actually, what we are probably seeing around is the playing out of Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs. This refers to the pyramid that Maslow laid out in the 1940s. He pointed out that there is a hierarchy of needs that we all have. Unless the basic ones are met, we cannot move up to those higher up the pyramid. Physical needs, such as food, shelter and clothing come at the bottom of the pyramid. Unless these are met, and unless we are secure about having them even in the future, we cannot move on to the other levels, which comprise entities such as self-actualisation.

Today, with rising income levels, and also a growing middle class, there is a kind of confidence in people, especially the young, that they will be able to meet their basic needs of food, shelter and Clothing, in the foreseeable future. There are, today, many who still enjoy the possessions that money brings, and even flaunt their newly-acquired belongings. A fantastic new car, expensively prepared food, a sumptuous house with exquisite furnishings, and pricey fashion accessories are all par for the course. Those who have remained at this stage are not, alas, above flaunting their stuff. But that too is to be taken in one's stride, provided, of course, that it is not ill-gotten.

And so now, we are seeing a rather newer phenomenon, something that was not really visible in our land till recently. This is Experience as Luxury.

Some words of context may be necessary here. It is often seen by those who travel to places such as Europe, for instance, that the local inhabitants, though certainly well-off, do not really indulge in luxury the way we do. They live simply, eat and drink comparatively simply, and while they do own a car or two, they prefer to use public transport. And, of course, they generally cook and clean for themselves, unlike Indians who, if they can afford it, immediately hire people to clean up after them. The European middle classes do not usually buy designer labels. Indeed, they do not own nearly as many clothes as the average Indian middle class person does. This has remained a matter of surprise for many here.

However, with the rise in disposable incomes, it does seem, sometimes, that we too seem to be following suit. A growing number of people now think of Experience as the best luxury that money can buy. And so, instead of buying those fancy shoes, they go on a backpacking holiday to Ladakh, soaking up memories to last a lifetime. Instead of acquiring that new SUV, they volunteer at an NGO for homeless elderly women, putting their work skills to use as they organise the inflows of funds into the shelter. Or perhaps they join a cooking class, and learn to bake the most melt-in-the-mouth cakes. Others sign up for courses in wine appreciation, or go on Nature walks in remote places.

All this is especially true of the post-liberalisation generation. Empowered by education, made confident by the rewards of the market economy, they are increasingly beginning to feel that the acquisition of possessions, merely, gives diminishing returns.

Things Considered, this is, indeed, very interesting. And intriguingly, these co-exist at one and the same time in our society, which is known for its diversity. So while one family continues to build a showy home, their neighbour plans a cruise to Antarctica. There will be nothing to show for this cruise, later, except the photographs. But how very enriching that will be, for the person who gets to see the White Continent!

5 THINGS / Down the years

"I can now feel the poem I studied in school – No man is an island"

Former bureaucrat SWAPNANIL BARUA looks back on his eventful work life.

1 Wanderlust

I am a wanderluster, seizing every opportunity to travel; one who has seen India from 18,000 ft. above sea level in the Himalayas to ten feet below sea level in the clear waters of the sea off the Lakshadweep Islands, traversing the length and breadth of the country.

2 Time passing

In the 60 years that I have lived, I have been serving or rather 'time passing' in the government, for 37 of them. Why I say 'time passing', is that I could not be a part of the nation-building process, which a public servant would normally be doing, rather spent it in agitation, starting with the Assam Movement. But I got to meet people, hear them, love them. I can now feel the poem we studied in school – No man is an island.

3 A smile, years after

It was a misty morning, April the 19th, 1980. Curfew had been promulgated, but the whole of Guwahati was on the streets, tej dim, tel nido. All roads led to the Narenji Pumping Station of OIL. I was only a few days into the service, when we came to accost the mob at Banamainaidam. I stood behind my DC and SP, when some one called out from the mob – 'What the hell are you doing on the other side?' I looked up and saw that I knew 20 people in the crowd, with Nirmal Prohba Bordoloi at the front. There was pushing and jostling as the crowds moved around. A mild lathi charge brought in some order. I found a watch on the road and then located the owner, Rubul, in a crowd of thousands.

4 Old man's query

A magistrate was then a powerful person, in the days of control. I could grant rationed petrol, sugar, cheap rice, kerosene, cement etc., making us a tribe to be reckoned with. So favour-seekers and crooks filled the courts. Once, I was sitting in my chamber in all pomp and vain glory. In walks an old man who wants to strike up a conversation. After a while, he asks me how many children I have. I tell him I am not married. Promptly comes the supplementary – even then? I catch him by the collar and throw him out.

5 A close shave

It's the 9/11 of 1999. I am on my way back from Guwahati to Barpeta, where I was the DC. We cross Gohgrapar in the evening, when firecrackers go off in metallic twangs. I ask my driver in surprise: Diwali is still a few days away, where the firecrack now?" Ambushes screen my PSO. I duck behind the seat, bullets fly past, later counted as a hundred plus. We pass through this hell, till my car breaks down. Only one injury and nine miraculously saves. (As told to Indrani Raimedhi)

FOODTALK

Dr. Ritu G. Goswami

Goodness of sprouts

Sprouting increases valuable nutrients in all foods. Any seed which is germinated helps in the prevention and treatment of various human diseases and is also helpful in improving the development of active components for functional food products and pharmaceuticals. Though Assamese people are rice-eaters, nowadays, many have included wheat in the form of rotis, parathas, purs, luchi, cakes, brownies, waffles, bread, muffins, patties and pancakes. Wheat, if taken in the form of sprouts, is very healthy, as during germination, all the nutrients increase in large amounts. Each 100 gms of wheat sprouts contains energy (198 Kcal), proteins (7.5 gms), fats (1.27 gms), fibres (1.1 gms), Vitamin C (2.6 mg), iron (1.24 mg), potassium (169 mg), zinc (1.65 mg) and omega-3 and omega-6 fatty acids. When wheat is sprouted for three days, the protein and Vitamin E content is increased by 300 per cent, Vitamin C by 600 per cent, and Vitamin B by 1000 per cent. Vitamin B17, known for its prevention of cancer, is 100 per cent higher than in unsprouted seeds. The levels of antioxidant phenolic compounds, such as rutin, tixin, isovitexin, orientin, iso-orientin, chlorogenic acid, trans-3-hydroxyacianic acid, and p-hydroxybenzoic acid increased significantly when sprouted over 72 hours.

Sprouting wheat: Unlike moong or Bengal gram sprouts, wheat takes a little more time for sprouting. Soak wheat seeds in water for six to 12 hours. Drain the water. Rinse the seeds carefully with cool water, and then drain again. Store them in optimal room temperature, away from direct sunlight. The fresh air helps the seeds grow into green. Rinse and drain several more times, every eight to 12 hours. After three days, the sprouts which come out are rich in nutrients. Wheat sprouts are tasty and have a nutty flavour and texture when consumed.

Culinary uses: Fresh wheat sprouts can be used in salads, added to vegetables and can be tossed with rice, chowmein, pasta, stir-fry dishes, etc.

Health benefits:

- Sprouts are beneficial for people who want to lose weight.
- Due to the presence of omega-3 fatty acids, sprouts decrease the risk of cardiovascular diseases.
- The fibre found in sprouts help in the digestive process and improve the overall metabolism.
- Consuming wheat sprouts is beneficial for people suffering from rheumatic pains and inflammation.
- Sprouts are also good for ailments such as osteoporosis, heart diseases, Alzheimer's and Type-2 diabetes.
- Since whole wheat and sprouts are rich in insoluble fibres, they lower the secretion of bile acids. Excessive bile acids are a major cause of gallstone formation.
- Wheat sprouts are good for the gastrointestinal health, especially in women.
- Eating sprouts helps in preventing anaemia due to their high Vitamin C content.
- Wheat grain sprouts have a lot of vitamins. They also have a good amount of proteins and enzymes.
- Being enriched with Vitamin E, sprouts help in building strong immunity. They are good for the skin and eyes. In foods, Vitamin E is rarely found. So, by eating wheat sprouts, one gets this vitamin which is present in the wheat germ, and is usually removed in flour milling.
